Several arrest warrants have been issued in an area shooting at Cook-Out on Sept. 1, according to a release from the Columbia Police Department.

Billy Jo Downs Jr. is expected to be charged with attempted armed robbery, possession of a firearm, murder, attempted armed robbery with the intent to kill, and 90° murder.

Detectives determined that the victim was one of several potential suspects who retreated to a parked vehicle following the incident, according to the release.

Police are asking anyone with information about the Sunday morning assault to submit tips to Crimestoppers.

Bojangles’ once located on Bluff Road across from the stadium, will be sold inside of the stadium this season. Bojangles’, once located only new addition to Williams-Brice end zone, which is in the heart of the student section. The other will be on the home side of Williams-Brice. The stands will be selling some of the popular fast food chain’s favorites, including Cajun filet sandwiches, seasoned fries and chicken supremes.

The Bluff Road location has changed, too. They’ve redesigned the dining room, decorating it with Gamecock graphics. And they’ve added an outdoor seating area as “part of a cooperative effort to upgrade the game-day experience,” according to a release.

Authorities emphasize railroad safety

It might not be a train that stops students as they trek to class this morning. Instead, they’ll encounter representatives from the USC Division of Law Enforcement and Safety, Columbia Police Department, Operation Lifesaver, Norfolk Southern and CSX transportation corporation.

Starting at 8:45 a.m., they’ll be holding a railroad crossing blitz near the Greek Village, a popular undergraduate student park area. Among the tips they’ll be offering students today:

— It crossing gates are down, don’t try to walk or drive around them.

— If your car stalls on the tracks, get everyone out, and call the 1-800 number listed near the crossing.

— Don’t try to climb over or otherwise get around the gates.

— Only cross railroad tracks at marked road or sidewalk crossings.

“Friday we will be in gameday mode, and we will not be taking a lot of time to go back and get students’ account information that they have known about or should have known about for about three months,” Edwards said.

“We can handle [small problems] when it’s downtime, but we’re in a drivetime,” Edwards said.

Edwards said she has not seen the ticket exchange page herself, but she expects the process to be clear to students once they log into their Ticketmaster account.

She and Adrienne White, the student ticket coordinator, said they think it should be fairly easy for students who have received their tickets to claim tickets from the exchange page.

“There are students already waiting to know how to get their tickets, so ... there should be plenty of tickets available,” White said.

On Saturday, students with lower-deck tickets need only present their CarolinaCards, with their tickets transferred onto them, at one of the four main student gates, and they will be given a general-admission wristband. They won’t need any paper documents to get in.

Students with upper-deck tickets must print their tickets prior to arriving at the stadium. They must present their printed ticket and CarolinaCard at Gate 18 and, because their seats are assigned, will not receive wristbands.

“Our goal is to get students into the stadium as swiftly and simply as possible, which is why we’ve moved to the CarolinaCard,” Edwards said. “Being prepared at the gate, having your card out, making sure it’s yours and that it’s valid, is the key to smooth things help more things along on game day.”

TICKETS & Info, from 1 the process and have to educate themselves.”

That means keeping tabs on their account information, knowing how to get to the exchange page, and following the tutorials, she said.

And, Edwards said, students should do so now so if they haven’t already, because the ticketing office will be hard-pressed to address problems after Thursday evening.

for taking over USC’s existing Division of System Affairs.

In the past, that division, part of the provost’s office, has taken care of financial aid and other services for the regional campuses, even as they’ve been treated as independent entities.

Palmetto College will combine them with a new slate of online classes. That side of the program kicked off this semester on a pilot scale with an online liberal arts curriculum, but come next fall, it’ll roll out five to seven new programs, Amiridis said.

Like other campus heads, the chancellor will report directly to USC President Harris Pastides, Byrd said.

Unlike them, he or she won’t have a dedicated chief academic officer.

Instead, Palmetto College will still keep a relationship with the Columbia campus’s provost.

But for now, USC still needs to find someone to take over the new role.

“This is our first priority,” Byrd said.

The moment we've all been waiting for has finally arrived. For weeks, we've been intuitive. Following the ticketing system football tickets. The process isn't exactly them of how to claim those long-awaited football tickets. With the first home start claiming our tickets and preparing the dark. For now, we hope we can finally received tickets now know how to claim to us, and even though the students who even get a chance to sign up for tickets die-hard fans up to date and in the know. For now, we don't know anything about the situation this week. With the rising prices and YouTube. It’s true. Those in the class of 2016 are being held by a very different class compared to those who came before them. It is true that the future of age is when we don't know how to develop pictures from negative film. No more than scanning and copying. The future of age is the mean we live in the dark. To such a weird and wondrous generalization. Just as it was wrong to single out anyone as a representative, this was also wrong. However, it is important that this year's freshmen, conscious of this new situation and for recognizing what they have known about age. With this new awareness, this year's freshmen registered to vote in larger numbers. With so many great things to think about, it is important to not limit the freshmen to a fact sheet or try to force them into an unsanctioned stereotyping.

Biodiesel fuel feasible alternative to gasoline

New developments in renewable energy could reduce dependence on petroleum

Regular, unleaded gasoline in Colombia is at $1.30 per gallon. In other parts of America, the price is over $4.00 per gallon. ove over, Yogurt. There’s a new dessert place in town. Paradise Ice, owned by Jessica and Joe Kastner, is now offering organic and locally produced fare that claims to be healthier and tastier than frozen yogurt and other sugary competitors.

Six months ago, the two Northerniers set up shop on Main Street with the desire to bring a Philadelphia-style to the Columbia area. Jessica, an ice cream lover, and Joe, a coffee lover, say they’re offering something new and different.

“Jessica Kastner said matter-of-factly. “When we and making a grinding motion with his hands. ground up,” Joe Kastner said, sitting in the store north of the Mason-Dixon Line.

“I tell people it’s like a top-of-the-line Popsicle to Main Street. It brings cool treats to the area. There’s a new love over, Yoghut. There’s a new dessert place in town. Paradise Ice, owned by Jessica and Joe Kastner, is now offering organic and locally produced fare that claims to be healthier and tastier than frozen yogurt and other sugary competitors.

An emphasis on healthy, simple ingredients — ones you can actually pronounce — are what set Paradise Ice apart, the Kastners said. Their conscious effort to go organic and buy responsibly is a point of pride. If it’s not handmade in the store, it’s purchased from local vendors, like the Sease farm in Lexington and Turtle Creek Coffee.

The result is a product made good by good ingredients. The Italian ice is smooth and airy, while the custard they use is creamy and satisfying. There are standard flavors like lemon and vanilla (which she and Joe painted), and Joe made the backgrounds in architecture and interior design, dark green carpet.  And for two people with Tots to Teens, a children’s clothing store with much more strenuous treks to the nearest frozen yogurt shop, you might not actually need to bite the perfect balance of both style and comfort. And we applaud you for discovering it. We’ll see you at the gym. Or maybe Starbucks.

What’s more impressive? The fact that you have a seemingly endless collection of gym shorts in assorted colors or the fact that even with your class schedule, you actually manage to make it to the gym every single day? We still cannot decide.

We all know these people. We can’t stand these people. Here’s everything you’ve ever wanted to say, but were too afraid to go there.

Dear Girl on the Bicycle,

We all know these people. We can’t stand these people. Here’s everything you’ve ever wanted to say, but were too afraid to go there.

Dear Kid on the Bicycle,

You bob and weave between thousands of students (who are also trying to make it to class on time) and your ability to ride said bike is on par with an elephant on a unicycle is quite disconcerting.

While we commend you for trying to preserve the environment and make it to class on time, the fact that your ability to ride said bike is on par with an elephant on a unicycle is quite disconcerting.

picked out the black tables and chairs to complement the rest of the decor. "When you're walking in, you're seeing us," Jessica Kastner said. The bottom line is putting out a perfect product in a perfect environment, hence the name Paradise. "Our product is good," Joe Kastner said. "We don't have to cover anything up. You shouldn't have to put toppings on something to cover up a bad product."

But Yoghut lovers have their own healthy defense. Frozen yogurt has live and active cultures, which are in essence good bacteria necessary for the body to function at its best, according to Yoghut owner Shafen Kahn. And most of the store's flavors are fat free.

By a purely caloric comparison, however, Italian ice has about 60 calories per half-cup serving, almost half the calories in a half-cup serving of low-fat frozen yogurt, which contains 107 calories, according to the Department of Agriculture's National Nutrient Database.

But for some students, some healthy ingredients are better than no healthy ingredients. "[Frozen yogurt] feels healthy; I can put fruit on it," said first-year public relations student Olivia Brocato. Others said they'll stick to water ice. "Frozen yogurt tastes like dyed ice cream to me," said first-year public relations student Rixey Moore. "Italian ice is more refreshing."
