College of Nursing Dean Jeannette Andrews expressed excitement and pride over the news in a press release. “The No. 1 ranking validates the strength of our exemplary students, faculty, staff and alumni, as well as their commitment to quality, innovation and rigor in our graduate programs,” Andrews said in the release.

The online graduate program moved up two spots in the U.S. News and World Report rankings from 2015. In the previous year, they were tied for third with the online nursing program of Johns Hopkins University. The program itself has been in place for 15 years, and it currently has around 118 students enrolled.

Andrews noted that the ranking reflects well upon the university as a whole as well as the state of South Carolina. “It is a high honor and privilege for the University of South Carolina College of Nursing and our state to achieve the top ranking in the nation,” Andrews said in the same release.

U.S. News and World Report considers a myriad of factors in their ranking system for online education programs. These factors include faculty credentials and training, student services, technology, admissions selectivity, peer reputation, and our state to achieve the top ranking in the nation. Andrews noted that the ranking reflects well upon the university as a whole as well as the state of South Carolina.

“aragraphed meetings for candidates and important dates and deadlines for those interested in running for an executive position in the student senate can attend an informational meeting on Jan. 14 in the senate chambers from 7 to 8 p.m., and those students interested in running for an executive position can attend an informational meeting that same evening from 8 to 9 p.m. There are mandatory candidate meetings as well as elections information sessions to prepare you for the selection process, the committee will also facilitate marketing and communication with the student body.

The Homecoming Commission will be required to attend a Student Leadership and Diversity Committee in an effort to ensure transparent, diverse leadership for the 2016 homecoming events. The new committee will be made up of one student each from 15 Hall of Leaders student organizations. Among these are Dance Marathon, Association of African American Students, the Residence Hall Association and Sport Club Council. In addition to implementing the selection process, the committee will also facilitate marketing and communication with the student body.

US Navy vessels held by Iran to be returned

According to The State, a Pentagon spokesperson has announced that the US Navy briefly lost contact with two of its vessels Tuesday, but that the US has been assured by Iranian officials that they will be returned promptly. The two vessels, described as small in nature, were traveling between the countries of Kuwait and Bahrain when they drifted into Iranian territorial waters after experiencing mechanical difficulties in the Persian Gulf at the time of the incident.

Spring Valley graduate opens gourmet bakeshop

Okha Heczegszki

Across from Food Lion in Five Points sits a quaint restaurant, complete with outdoor seating decorated with blue umbrellas. A case of mouthwatering pastries greets you upon entering Rise Gourmet Goods & Bakeshop, and a chatty staff is eager to help you select a meal from a walled menu of teal and orange script. Their most popular menu item, “The Gamecock,” is also one of Scruggs’ favorites—a fried chicken sandwich that comes with a little bit of Sriracha mayo and house-made pickles.

“One thing the city has needed for a while is a bakery with sandwiches and salads that we make in-house. We have a mixture of daily pastries that we make in-house. We make them all fresh every morning,” Charley Scruggs, who helped open the new establishment along with owner Sarah Simmons, said. “And we have a mixture of a lunch menu with sandwiches and salads and also a breakfast menu with breakfast bowls and breakfast sandwiches.” Simmons is a local at heart. She grew up in Columbia and attended Spring Valley High School. An experienced chef and restaurant guru, she opened a successful restaurant called Birds and Bubbles in New York. Wanting to come back to town to find her roots, Simmons came back to Columbia and opened Rise, and a unique culinary experience was born. Although Luckey has criticized Sony’s headset for not being as high-end as the Oculus Rift and said that the PlayStation 4 is not nearly as powerful, many are hopeful that the PlayStation VR will make a premium, but affordable, VR headset for console games.

“I could see it being more than $300… because at that point you’re spending as much as the console is worth now. I think $299 is the sweet point,” Colin Moriarty of Kinda Funny Games said in October.

However, one day after the Rift price was released, Amazon Canada listed PlayStation VR for what is equivalent to about $800 USD. Sony has said that it was an error and that the price point has not yet been announced, and the release date looked to be a placeholder, but after such recent news, perhaps there is more than meets the eye to the leak.

So, what does this all mean for gaming?

Well, VR has been infamously hard to demo without trying it yourself, and with the news of a higher price point than many were expecting, VR will likely become more niche than even it originally was going to be. But don’t fret. Geoffrey Morrison of CNET offers some sort of good news.

“The Rift won’t always be $600. The next generation will be cheaper and better. Don’t forget, the first DVD and Blu-ray players were $1,000,” Morrison said. “The first flat-panel TVs were $10,000. In all of those cases and most others, the first generation was the worst of that product type. They got better — and cheaper. In all cases, with great rapidity.”

VR is certainly the future of gaming, and most likely will be used beyond that in ways that we have yet to even discover. All this news really means is that the future, for most people, is just a little further away than initially thought.

GOP Obamacare attacks insulting

The Affordable Care Act has been the focus of the Republican-held Senate once again, this time in the form of a bill that would effectively dismantle Obamacare.

The House Ways and Means Committee has voted to allow for the Republican-led GOP to have the right to vote on emergency funding, and if not for the Speaker of the House, the bill would have passed.

Clemson’s misguided, wasteful football aspirations

They spent almost twice as much as USC did for recruiting from 2009 to 2011. Their assistant coaches are the third-highest-paid staff behind LSU’s and Alabama’s. And the price tag for their new $55 million facility? Though Swinney’s chief of staff makes $21,000 a year, the head coach makes a million.

Clemson clearly has dreams of not only playing with Alabama on the field, but also with the best teams in the country. Their football program is seeing a brand new facility that will replace the old one after this season.

The website’s price estimates are also said to be inaccurate. People are confused by the website’s interface. It is preposterous to assume that the health insurance companies are not reflected in the prices.

Despite the shortcomings of the Affordable Care Act, it has at least laid the foundation to be a less expensive, more efficient means of healthcare.

Republicans have not only been unwilling to amend the government-run healthcare policies, but they have also been unwilling to accept compromise in any form. And the government-run plans are already much more successful than the private models.

Several new plans that have been offered, such as those for low-income individuals, can contribute to their health savings. Donald Trump has also expressed interest in the idea of “repealing and replacing” Obamacare plans, which would allow for a government-financed universal healthcare system.

Painting his plan as a “forced general enrollment” move, Trump has already been talking about making a new healthcare system that is not just the Affordable Care Act.

For all the plans and schemes we may make about healthcare and the benefits that should exist, the people need to understand that it is not a matter of funding and energy into education.

Clemson’s misguided, wasteful football aspirations

The Clemson Tigers have lost the battle for this year’s college football national championship. But they did win the coming war.

The arms race will surely underly for college football another year, as well as another year’s worth of bills that will effectively dismantle the ACC.

The new “athletic facility” being built for Clemson’s football team will include laser tag, a movie theater, bowling lanes, and a golf course. And if not for the Speaker of the House, the bill would have passed.

For all the plans and schemes we may make about healthcare and the benefits that should exist, the people need to understand that it is not a matter of funding and energy into education.

Crimson Tide rolls in Championship game

Claudio Chakamian

The 2016 College Football Playoff National Championship game featured the two top teams in the country: No. 2 Alabama and No. 1 Clemson.

Clemson was looking for its second national title, its first in 34 years, and to continue its undefeated season. The last time Clemson won was in 1981, also the last time the Tigers faced off in the season unafraid. Alabama entered the game with 13 losses under its belt — last one in 2012.

The game started off slow, but the Crimson Tide struck first, thanks to a 30-yard touchdown run by Heisman Trophy winner Derrick Henry. The Tigers retaliated immediately with six plays for 54 yards on their touchdown drive. Deshaun Watson threw to Hunter Renfrow to tie the game at seven.

The second quarter was full of action and excitement. Alabama started off with a 33-yard field goal to tie the game at 24. Griffith completed an on-side kick caught by Alabama which led to a 51-yard touchdown pass from Coker to Howard, their second of the night. A 31-yard field goal made it 31-27. The Tigers were not giving up and answered with a 37-yard field goal to cut the Crimson Tide’s lead to 21-17.

The fourth quarter was full of action and excitement. Alabama started off with a 35-yard field goal to tie the game at 24. Griffith completed an on-side kick caught by Alabama which led to a 51-yard touchdown pass from Coker to Howard, their second of the night. A 31-yard field goal made it 31-27. The Tigers were not giving up and answered with a 37-yard field goal to cut the Crimson Tide’s lead to 21-17.

Watson gave it all he had. He passed for 405 passing yards, four touchdowns, and extended their lead 24-21.
