ARTH 544R: Robert Mills

Graniteville Room
Thomas Cooper Library
March 2002
The books listed here have been selected for a visit to Special Collections by students studying the career of the South Carolina architect Robert Mills (1781-1855), now best-known as architect of the Washington Monument. Several of these titles were among those that Mills himself listed as influencing his development as an architect, while others represent the major schools of architectural influence from which he drew in his work.

ROBERT MILLS

The Department of Rare Books & Special Collections is located on the Mezzanine Level of Thomas Cooper Library. Many items in the core collection (and in this exhibit) date back to the library of the antebellum South Carolina College. Among major holdings are the double-elephant folio of Audubon’s Birds of America, and collections on Robert Burns, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, Giuseppe Garibaldi, Charles Darwin, Civil War military history, and historical children’s literature.

The Graniteville Reading Room is open to registered readers Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., with major displays in the adjacent exhibit gallery accessible to visitors during all library opening hours.

The history of the library is surveyed in the Bicentennial exhibition, 200 Years of USC Libraries, now available in a web version, and other web-exhibits from the Department’s holdings of special interest to the history of art and illustration include Audubon and Others: Illustrated Bird Books from the 16th to the 19th Centuries and The Culture of Camellias: an exhibit from the Phelps Memorial Collection. These and other exhibits are available from the department’s web-page at www.sc.edu/library/spcoll/rarebook, and individual titles can be traced through USCAN, the library’s on-line catalogue.
