THE SOUTH CAROLINA LAW QUARTERLY

VOL. 3

SEPTEMBER, 1950

NO. 1

FOREWORD

—versus - United States of America, our first article is one which should be of great practical value to the Bar as well as of extreme interest to students. The Author writes, from personal experience in many instances, in a most expressive style. The subject under discussion concerns one of the most lucrative fields of the Law; suits under the Federal Tort Claims Act. An excellent coverage of this field as well as pertinent comments on South Carolina Law are presented.

The Relationship of Law and Medicine, is a scholarly attainment worthy of the attention of all our readers. The subject is introduced on a highly philosophical level and developed on a more practical plane. Tulane University has recently instituted a course in Law and Medicine in its Law School Curriculum, indicating the increased importance of the subject.

Taxation of Income to Authors, presents a highly interesting and exhaustive treatment of the subject. The problem, when an author's product may be treated as a capital gain, as well as problems concerning other opportunities for tax avoidance, is considered at length. The problems of nonresident alien authors are also considered.

A Summary of the General Enactments of the 1950 General Assembly, is published in the hope that such a summary will be useful and informative as to the more pertinent recent legislation. It will be our policy to continue printing timely summaries of this kind.

International Copyright Protection, the winning paper from the Nathan Burkan Memorial Competition, held for the first time in our Law School appears in the Note section of this issue. This contest will be held in the Law School annually and it will be the pleasure of the Law Quarterly to continue to encourage participation.

We feel thrice blessed having received such excellent cooperation from the Bar, Faculty and Students in preparing our contribution to legal writing. This publication is dedicated to the service and use of the practicing lawyer, as well as being a compilation of legal thought for students. We hope that we are fulfilling this purpose and respectfully solicit your continued participation and guidance.

RALPH BAILEY, JR.
