THE SOUTH CAROLINA LAW QUARTERLY

VOL. 3

MARCH, 1951

NO. 3

FOREWORD

The adoption of two bills, the Uniform Partnership Act and the Divorce Act, by the General Assembly, last year, present the topics for our first two articles. These two timely articles should be both informative and interesting reading for the Bar of the state.

Partnership Law and the Uniform Partnership Act in South Carolina, is to be published in three parts, the first presented herein, and the rest to be published in following issues. This article contains an exhaustive study on the law of partnerships in this state and the effect of the Uniform Act thereon. The author deals with the Act in sections and this makes the article an easy departure for research on problems arising in connection with the Act.

The article dealing with divorce gives an excellent presentation of the recent statute and the general divorce law relating thereto. Since divorce litigation is a comparatively new field in this state, we believe that the Bar will find this article a helpful refresher on the subject.

Our third article, Constitutional Limitations on Public Finance in South Carolina, was written by a nationally accepted authority on the subject. The author, delving deeply into the background of the leading cases, explains with clarity the complex constitutional requirements. This article surely will be of benefit to anyone who, for the first time, has become entangled in this phase of the law.

All three of our articles in this issue deal primarily with South Carolina law. While it is our policy to publish timely articles of general interest covering national as well as local law, the fundamental importance of these topics and their effect on South Carolina law gives us reason to feel that they should be published at this time.

A. ARTHUR ROSENBLUM.
