Letter from the Co-Editors

During these challenging times, we are happy to share this latest issue of South Carolina Libraries. Take a break from your every day and see what fellow colleagues from across the state are doing in their libraries. We know that as a society we have been faced with many obstacles in 2020. Our hearts are heavy with the thoughts of sadness, loss, and devastation that has occurred across the country and world. From racial and social injustices to the global pandemic and the devastating wildfires, we know that we are all facing challenges in our everyday lives, this issue hopes to highlight the amazing efforts that are happening throughout South Carolina's libraries. Now is the time to let your voice be heard.

The editorial board would like to thank our current authors, book reviewers and peer reviewers for making this issue a success. We are looking forward to the annual conference coming up and the submissions to follow for our next conference edition of the journal. If you are interested in publishing, writing a book review, or serving as a peer reviewer please reach out to us. As a reminder, we welcome and encourage submissions from librarians, library workers, and library students.
