Fall 2021 Issue Co-Editor Letter

South Carolina Libraries welcomes another academic year full of activity. Although many libraries across the state have moved into a “new normal” workflow, we are all still working in overdrive. Librarians from all sorts of libraries across South Carolina have stepped up to provide access, resources, programming, and a helping hand to our patrons during challenging times over the past year. We would like to thank each of you for your dedication to your community and the profession. You will find this issue filled with community focused and collaborative projects. There are a number of book reviews that highlight a variety of literature telling the known and unknown stories of South Carolina’s history.

We can’t do this without you! South Carolina Libraries and the South Carolina Library Association needs you. Please consider submitting an article or volunteering with the journal or the association. We have seen a decrease in membership since the start of the pandemic and an even greater decrease in volunteerism. In order to provide innovative services and promote libraries and intellectual freedom in our state, we need your help! As we celebrate each other’s success at this year’s conference, please consider how you can make a difference through our association.
