Letter from the Co-Editors

Welcome to the conference issue of South Carolina Libraries.

The 2022 Annual Conference was a breath of fresh air for many and a little stressful for others, according to the conversations overhead throughout the conference. Adventuring out to an in-person conference provides opportunity for networking that has been missing in the virtual world. The editorial board used the conference as an opportunity to educate, recruit, and market the journal. We played matchmaker in our session, connecting collaborators and mentors to help folks find partners for their next research projects. It was full of great conversations had about upcoming research projects. If you have ideas for submissions to the journal, please reach out. Enjoy this edition which includes some great takeaways from the conference.

We are always looking for opportunities to bring new voices to the journal. We are also interested in finding librarians from all types of libraries to serve as peer review editors, book reviewers, and editors on our editorial board. If you have an interest or want to learn more, please let us know.
