CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE

James ANDERSON: Is a Scottish schoolmaster in Edinburgh. He was awarded the Ph.D. at Edinburgh University in 1965 with a thesis "Sir Walter Scott and History," which gained him the Hume Brown Senior Prize in Scottish History. During the academic year 1965-1966 he held a Carnegie Fellowship for study of the Scottish historians after Scott.

Philip J. KLUKOFF: B.A., Allegheny College; M.A. and Ph.D., Michigan State University. Instructor at the University of Cincinnati, 1963-1965; presently Assistant Professor at Wayne State University. Has published in Notes and Queries and Neuphilologische Mitteilungen and is currently working on a book on Smollett attributions in the Critical Review.

William MONTGOMERIE: Born in Glasgow. Graduated M.A. at Glasgow and Ph.D. at Edinburgh. He published Via and Squared Circle, both books of verse; contributed an essay to New Judgments: Robert Burns, which he edited; and with his wife edited Scottish Nursery Rhymes, Sandy Candy (traditional folk rhymes), and Well at the World's End (Scottish folk tales). He has contributed poems, short stories, and articles to many publications. He feels that his essay "More an Antique Roman than a Dane," published in the Hibbert Journal (October 1961), solves the Hamlet problem of the play-within-the-play.
