

Faculty Senate Information Technology Committee Report

Date: 2018-02-27

Chair: Simon Tarr, School of Visual Art and Design

The Faculty Senate IT Committee is organizing the third annual Symposium on Research Computing, which will take place Thursday, April 26 in the Hollings Library.

The Symposium features distinguished keynote speakers and current faculty research presentations to highlight the research computing infrastructure landscape and needs at the University, and to provide a place to serendipities connections among faculty who use and are interested in using research computing in their work.

This year's keynote speakers will be announced soon, and the call for proposals for faculty presentations will be forthcoming shortly. Interested faculty should save the date and be on the lookout for the CFP.
