South Carolina, A Rich and Varied Heritage

South Carolina is known for its rich and diverse history. From the prehistoric eras to the modern times, the state has a lot to offer to those interested in archaeology and history. The state has a number of archaeological sites, museums, and historical landmarks that provide insight into the past.

The South Carolina Institute of Archaeology and Anthropology (SCIAA) is an organization dedicated to the study and preservation of South Carolina's cultural heritage. The institute conducts research, offers educational programs, and provides outreach services to promote an understanding of the state's archaeological and historical resources.

Archaeological Resources in South Carolina

The SCIAA offers a variety of resources for those interested in South Carolina's archaeological past. These include:

- Museum exhibitions and educational programs
- Archaeological surveys and excavations
- Research and publication of archaeological findings
- Collaborations with other organizations and institutions

The institute also offers certification programs for those interested in pursuing careers in archaeology.

Sport Divers & Archaeology

South Carolina is home to a number of recreational diving sites, many of which are located in areas with significant archaeological potential. The SCIAA works closely with local diving communities to ensure that these sites are protected and preserved.

The institute offers diving programs that incorporate archaeological education, providing divers with opportunities to learn about the history and cultural significance of the sites they explore. This approach not only enhances the diving experience but also fosters a deeper appreciation for the state's archaeological heritage.

Eight Ways You Can Preserve the Past

1. Visit an archaeological site in South Carolina and learn about its cultural significance.
2. Support South Carolina's archaeological heritage by making a donation to the SCIAA.
3. Report any site damage or unusual activities to the SCIAA.
4. Take part in archaeological surveys or excavations as a volunteer or participant.
5. Support the SCIAA's educational programs and outreach efforts.
6. Promote the importance of archaeological conservation to others.
7. Participate in archaeological research projects.
8. Volunteer at archaeological sites or with the SCIAA.

By taking these steps, we can work together to ensure that South Carolina's archaeological sites are preserved for future generations.
