Models hit the runway to raise awareness about safe sex

Claire Randall / THE DAILY GAMECOCK

A spin on the television show “Project Runway,” Project Condom asked students to design and create a fashionable outfit to be graded by a panel of judges. And if that wasn’t hard enough, the garments had to be made primarily out of condoms, an effort to promote safe and healthy sexual practices among USC students.

In the end, 12 teams took on the daunting challenge and created outfits made with condoms to showcase before an eager crowd.

According to USC Productions, which organized the event, created a runway that spanned almost half of the Russell House Ballroom. The group will finish their journey on top of Federal Hill in Baltimore, Md., on July 26 after a 4,000-mile trek.

Jenn Gunsauluss, a sexual health and psychology expert and cancer survivor, will join a team of around 150 runners between 8 and 13 miles a day.

“Being a cancer survivor, it’s going to be a really cool opportunity for me to see how people are really going to engage with each other,” Gunsauluss said.

The group will also make five stops to do community service. They will also make five stops to do community service. They will also make five stops to do community service. They will also make five stops to do community service.

Every mile matters for Rooney

Graduate student plans to trek from Calif. to Md. this summer

Natalie Pita

While most students spend the summer trying to relax after a long year of classes, Natalie Rooney will spend 41 days of running more than 4,000 miles across the country.

On June 15, Rooney, graduate assistant for the Capstone Scholars Program, will start a team of around 30 undergraduate and graduate students at the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco, Calif., as part of 4K for Cancer’s 2014 Run Across America.

The group will finish their journey on top of Federal Hill in Baltimore, Md., on July 26 after running between 8 and 13 miles a day.

“It’s going to be a really cool experience, and we’re helping to make a really big difference in the lives of these young adults who are fighting for their lives every day,” said Rooney, who will be the run director.

Each member of the team is required to run at least 40 miles, and as of Wednesday, Rooney had run 25 miles or 50 percent.

“The money goes directly to support patients, including scholarships and chemotherapy bags that help make patients more comfortable,” Rooney said.

During the trip, the runners will give away scholarships to two students battling cancer. They will also make five stops to do community service.

“For me, I really enjoy doing things that serve other people,” Rooney said. “I’m really excited for the service days where we actually get to engage with young adults for cancer.”

the end of the session.

"I wish we would have looked at more small improvements for things we could advocate for, instead of paying so much attention to this if we were just going to withdraw it in the end," he said.

But in the end, Gray said pulling the bill was the best decision, considering the circumstances the senate faced at the end of the session.

"We should have seen it through the end, and that’s not really something we did, but it was a smart move by the end when it started to fall apart," he said.

And although the final session fizzled out in terms of legislative progress, Richardson reminded senators of the progress they made during their time. During the 2013-14 term, the senate passed 40 pieces of legislation and several resolutions, updated the finance codes and revamped the SG codes to create seven chapters of updated codes. "What was achieved tonight was a more solid foundation," Richardson said in an email after the meeting, referring to the decision to defer the issue to the next senate. "Hopefully, it will at least serve as a guiding light to help them navigate through what we as a senate struggled with."
A bill was withdrawn after 5 weeks of debate.

Senator Richardson withdrew Student Government’s proposed constitution before the senate could take a vote Wednesday, March 5.

It’s tough not to be frustrated about how a 5-month time period is trying to pass yet the only thing that’s really affected the student body. Frankly, the bill should have been introduced much earlier than it was to avoid this missed budget opportunity, but there’s not much sense crying over lost time now. This news is as the senate had a fairly productive week; 40 pieces of legislation, a handful of resolutions and two demands of the finance and SG codes over the last few days. Generally, government is either making progress or being pushed by pressure; if you ask us, SG made respectable progress, but still falls short of being compliant, or even content.

The primary benefit of SG regarding issues that truly matter is the student body in order to focus on the issues that truly matter.

After a year focused on working on SG’s internal issues, it’s time the organization gets to work on the problems facing the student body at large. What is promising is that there are indeed members of SG who are aware of the $43.8 trillion between enacting legislation and actually making an impact. One solution, mentioned by Richardson, is to elect Donnie Foro, is creating an open floor for students to talk about what they care about.

“Like I’d be interested in seeing more than SG regarding issues that truly matter is the student body in order to focus on the issues that truly matter.”

The act shows a need to reconsider. For the record, it’s not like Richardson withdraws bills, but often is the case. What’s promising is that there are indeed members of SG who are aware of the public and other things that happen in the Senate. Richardson argues that the Senate has a fairly productive week, with 40 pieces of legislation, a handful of resolutions, and two demands on the finance and SG codes.

Generally, government is either making progress or being pushed by pressure; if you ask us, SG made respectable progress, but still falls short of being compliant, or even content.

Obama budget projections unrealistic

Two main tax hikes, too low to examine

Earlier this week, President Barack Obama released his budget proposal for 2014, which includes two main tax hikes that are too low to examine. Many components of the proposal are consistent with past recommendations, such as reducing the deficit and improving the education system.

President Obama’s budget projections are not an effective way of doing this. The budget covers the years 2014 to 2024, but it barely even covers the new spending programs without claiming that they brought lots of bang for the buck.

Obama's budget achieves its mild deficit requirement by raising the tax rate of the top 1%, which is not an effective way of increasing revenue. The budget proposes a $48.5 trillion deficit in 2014, which is $7 trillion in new spending programs, but it barely even covers the new spending programs without claiming that they brought lots of bang for the buck.

The new spending programs are driving students, but it barely even covers the new spending programs without claiming that they brought lots of bang for the buck. Additionally, the budget does not account for the increased costs of the Affordable Care Act.

The new spending programs are driving students, but it barely even covers the new spending programs without claiming that they brought lots of bang for the buck. Additionally, the budget does not account for the increased costs of the Affordable Care Act. The overall spending on health care in the budget is $3 trillion, which is not enough to cover the increased costs of the Affordable Care Act.
The recent production “Yellowman” was a step forward, students said, but it stood as one of the few exceptions to a system where black actors have trouble securing roles.

While the number of full-time theater majors is almost triple, to 34, Amber Middleton, a fourth-year theater student who played a supporting actress in “Yellowman,” said the department is “outstanding,” but she also said she is disappointed with the number of acting opportunities available to students of color.

“I cannot speak for all African American students,” Middleton said. “However, for myself as well as others I affiliate with, we would like to see more racial diversity in the casting process. While the number of black actors seems to be on the rise, there is still a lack of variety in the kinds of roles that are available to students of color.

It is important that we continue to push for diversity and inclusion in the theater program. By speaking out about our experiences, we can work towards a future where all students have equal opportunities to succeed and shine. This is not just for our sakes, but for the sake of the entire community.

Theater majors need work, and it’s the job of USC’s theater program to provide it. However, behind the intricate posters and large-scale models, lie smaller, more intimate issues in the availability of roles to increasing numbers of minority actors.

Spring break’s coming up, which means you have two options: total alcohol-induced bedlam or something serene can of a beach, or watching more Netflix than seems humanly possible.

If you choose the latter-friendly second option, here are a few of seasonally popular titles:

Bates Motel (season 1 streaming; season 2 airs Mondays at 9 p.m. on A&E)

For a series that is a prequel to a seminal film classic but set in the modern day, “Bates Motel” is shockingly strong. The Alfred Hitchcock film “Psycho,” the granddaddy of slashers films, is the basis for this ABC series. Freddie Highmore plays Norman Bates (played by Anthony Perkins in the film), and Oscar nominee Vera Farmiga (“The Conjuring”) plays his mother. The series begins with Norman’s father “accommodating” a boy and the family moving to a seemingly peaceful Oregon town to start a new life. The slowly familiar Bates House rises up from the shadows to create the classic motel/basement setting. “Psycho” fans will definitely enjoy this compelling series.

Woman’s Suffrage

The play had its world premiere last month. The production aimed to present at the Booker T. Washington Lab Theater last semester. The story presented to African American actors. The production of “Yellowman” was a step forward, students said, but it stood as one of the few exceptions to a system where black actors have trouble securing roles.

“I didn’t necessarily see “Yellowman” as being the solution, but it was a great way to get people listening to and understanding the issues that we face—not just African Americans, but other races as well,” said Middleton.

The production of “Yellowman” influenced the push for a recent production, “A Woman’s Suffrage,” that was presented in the Lab Theater last month. The production aimed to take a different approach to the typical roles available to African American actors by incorporating musical elements, drama, and comedy without a story about slave ancestry or latter ones. This play explores emotional, verbal and physical abuse,” said Socia Chatman, a fourth-year broadcast journalism student who wrote “A Woman’s Suffrage.” So many talented professional actors do not be chosen for main stage shows.”

I believe that students should be given the right to a role that is exactly what I would choose if it were open to me, but instead, I just accepted the roles and the cast that was chosen for main stage shows.”

Mad Men (season 1-5 streaming; season 7 premieres April 15 on FX)

In “Mad Men,” the show has a great deal to say about the not-so-distant past and resonates with the current day. The show has been a critical and commercial success, and the writing and acting are top-notch. The series takes place in a mid-60s advertising agency, and the story follows the lives of the employees as they navigate the challenges of the era. The show is known for its attention to detail, from the fashion and music to the set design.

Louie (seasons 1-3 streaming; season 4 premieres in May on FX)

Louis C.K. has the best television show of anyone working today. The stand-up comedian’s show is a raw, unfiltered look into the life and work of a world-class comedian, Louie Theroux. The show is known for its honest and candid portrayal of life on the road.

Fargo (seasons 1-3 streaming; season 4 premieres in May on FX)

Braden Massey, a third-year broadcast studies student and the male lead of “Mad Men,” said that the issue of racism in the department needs to be stepped outside of the traditional and go for something that is more of a “step.” Some students said they would like to see a broader range of roles available to students of color. Though they acknowledged the show’s diversity, some students said they would like to see more diversity in the types of roles available to students of color.

I believe that students should be given the right to choose what type of role they want, but instead, I just accepted the roles that were given to me. This is unfair to the students who are not of a certain skin color versus dark skin color and cannot be considered as a “step,” some students said they would like to see a broader range of roles available to students of color.

Stand-up comedy

Some students believe that the stand-up comedy scene is not as diverse as it should be. They say that it is important to have a diverse range of voices and perspectives represented in the medium.

After sweeping rival Clemson over the weekend, the Gamecock baseball team fought through the cold to win high honors of a two-game home stand against Stetson this week.

It was not until the seventh inning of No. 3/4 South Carolina’s 4-2 Wednesday victory that the South Carolina bats came alive.

Senior Chad Holbrook said the emotional series opener, rolling it on first base.

“Like it was certainly in doubt until late,” he said. “I don’t know if we didn’t have the energy we normally have when we came into the stadium today.”

Junior center fielder Tanner English led off the bottom of the seventh inning with a single followed by a walk earned by sophomore Marcus Mooney.

Sophomore second baseman Max Schrock grounded into a fielder’s choice that left runners on first and third, but Schrock injured his left ankle on the play after rolling on first base. The senior will be keying on this weekend.

After Schrock, junior Joey Pankake may have broken out of his struggles with an RBI single to push the Gamecocks’ deficit to one run. With two outs, Junior Connor Bright tied the game at two when he hustled out an infield single on a ground ball to short.

With the single, Bright has hit safely in all 12 games so far this season, and he has a 3-game hitting streak going back to last season.

Bright rode wild, getting runners on second and third for redshirt freshman Weber Pike, who came into the game earlier for junior Elliott Caldwell. Stetson reliever Tyler Warnolt got ahead in the count, but Pike managed to hit what turned out to be a game-winning single that brought Pankake and Bright home to give the Gamecocks a 4-2 lead.

“I got down-2-2 pretty easily and was just trying to fight it off at that point,” Pike said. “And it got over the shortstop’s head.”

The bullpen stepped up in a big way on Wednesday, allowing six runs after sophomore right-handed starter Carr Britt went 2.1 innings, allowing three hits, two walks and two earned runs.

Sophomore Vince Fiori came in and pitched 3.2 scoreless innings, allowing five hits and striking out three batters.

Junior Hunter Pate pitched the seventh inning and ended up earning the win while junior Cody Munley retired all three batters he faced in the eighth inning.

Facing the heart of Stetson’s lineup in the first two innings on their way to a 7-1 victory.

South Carolina women’s golf team will look to start spring break on a high note when it travels to Hilton Head Island to compete in the Desert Intercollegiate Invitational.

The weekend tournament held at Long Cove Club will give the Gamecocks tough competition, as quality teams will be vying for top finishes.

Of the 17 teams competing in Hilton Head, 10 are ranked in the top 25, including No. 12 South Carolina. Six of the teams — Duke, Arizona State, Alabama, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Stanford — are ranked in the top 10 and look to be the opponents the Gamecocks will be keying on this weekend.

South Carolina’s No. 12 ranking is the highest the Gamecocks have ever been in the Golf World/WGA Division I College Coaches’ Poll. A strong performance against worthy teams in the tournament could push them into the top 10.

South Carolina will bring its high ranking and momentum into the weekend after finishing first in its last outing, at the Florida State Match-Up on Valentine’s Day weekend.

The Gamecocks were two-stroke victors as the team shot 7-over-par, with Clemson finishing second.

Five Gamecocks placed in the individual top 20, with sophomore Sarah Schmelzel’s second-place finish leading the way.

The win helped validate South Carolina’s top-15 ranking, and it shines the spotlight on Katelyn Dambaugh.

The Grove Creek native was named the SEC Freshman of the Week after her performance in the Florida State Match-Up. Along with finishing top-10 for the third time this year, Dambaugh tied for the third-lowest 18-hole score in program history after shooting a 67 in the final round.

“I believe we’re our low-stroke average for the fall, and everybody really performed pretty well, but Katelyn definitely stepped up,” head coach Chad Holbrook said.

Her performance has earned her a spot in the top 50 for the first time in her career, which is why the redshirt freshman entered the game.

“That sucker, I have the utmost confidence in him swinging the bat,” Holbrook said. “I think he’s going to continue to be a key player for the rest of the year.”

With the two wins, the Gamecocks remain undefeated at 12-0, while Stetson drops to 2-3-1.

Senior Hunter Privette pitched the seventh inning and ended up earning the win while junior Cody Munley retired all three batters he faced in the eighth inning.

Facing the heart of Stetson’s lineup in the first two innings on their way to a 7-1 victory.

Junior outfi elder Connor Bright hit safely in both games against Stetson, extending his current hitting streak to an impressive 13 games dating back to last season.
