The USC football program received a letter of inquiry from the NCAA Thursday, initiating an investigation of the program.

A letter of inquiry is different from a letter of allegation. An NCAA notice of investigation is a notice of investigation, while an NCAA notice of allegation is a notice of evidence found to allege violations.

Addressed to USC president Harris Pastides, the letter, signed by NCAA Vice President of Legal Affairs,表示 that the program is under investigation “for a violation of team rules, Bylaw 2.5.2 of the NCAA enforcement procedures.”

Below 2.5.2 reads: “If the enforcement staff has developed reasonably reliable information indicating that an institution has been in violation of NCAA legislation that requires further investigation, the enforcement staff shall provide a notice of inquiry in writing to the chancellor or president.

The letter does not address any new issues other than the ongoing investigations regarding tight end Weslye Saunders’ living arrangements of 10 USC players at a rental home in Miami, the living arrangements of 10 USC players at Columbia’s Whitney Inn. It states that “new information often is developed during the investigation and that leads to expanded inquiries,” but, as of now, no new issues have come to light and no players will face new suspensions for the upcoming SEC opener against Georgia.

In addition to Saunders, who is suspended indefinitely for a violation of team rules, offensive tackle Jarriel King and cornerback Chris Culliver did not play in Carolina’s season opener due to investigations into their eligibility. Culliver was declared eligible to play against UGA on Tuesday night, but King’s status remains unknown.

Per NCAA Bylaw 12.5.1.3, the NCAA staff is informed of any new expanded inquiries as they happen and receives reports on the NCAA on the progress of the investigation every six months, beginning with the date of the letter, Sept. 8. However, the letter indicates that the NCAA enforcement staff plans to complete the investigation by the end of the month.

Pastides addressed the letter in a statement.

Haley, family’s tax evasion warning

Everyone knows that Nikki Haley hates taxes. She blames them so much she doesn’t just stop at voicing her position — she refuses to pay them. It was revealed last month that she has paid only a minimal amount of income taxes in recent years. Apparently, it runs in the family. According to an AP article, Friday’s “SC had tax liens assessed” report was not the first time this issue cropped up for the Greenville home of former South Carolina Governor Alec Campbell. Those tax liens were eventually paid off, and the Campbells now say they are beginning to acknowledge the invaluable power of sustainable living.

In response to the author’s assessment that the founding fathers of the American republic intended for the church and state to be separated, I am, in opposition to her views in this regard, forwarding the notion that what really struck me was what the people of Cleveland’s urban farming plan should grow investment experience is. This is the kind of person we want managing our state’s budget?

The Texas-native band was formed in 2002 in a church sanctuary, when vocalist/guitarist Andy Pena and bassist Devin Dignan, whose name comes from director Wes Anderson’s "Bottle Rocket," met keyboardist/backup vocalist Heidi Plueger and multi-instrumentalist Davy Palomo, the foursome became fast friends, and from that friendship sprouted their musical collaborations. Dignan brings unique, accessible independent sound to SC this weekend.

The location of the show was the new home of New York Fashion Week, the Lincoln Center. Each of the 157 looks showcased on the runway were based on the trends of plaid, twenties glamour, rock chic, romantic minimalism, ladylike ensembles, utilitarian outerwear and knitwear. Though the show only lasted 20 minutes, including the runway show and a performance by Pharrell Williams, the show excelled in its mission of exciting the crowd for the coming weekend extravaganzas.

Fashion’s Night Out gives the chance for shoppers to get exclusive access to many stores and the opportunity to shop with the stars and see big names in fashion such as Anna Wintour, Karl Lagerfeld, Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen and tons of supermodels up close in person. The second annual event, whose slogan is “Shop for Something Good,” is the biggest shopping event of the year, providing patron with a fun night out instead of the regular-old shopping trip. The official website for the event 100 even allows you to plan out the entire evening to include celebrity appearances, free gifts with purchase, refreshments, pop-up shops, contests, designer appearances, exhibitions and tons more.

Fashion’s Night Out is the first and only event of its kind, thought up by fashion leader Anna Wintour in an effort to revive the fashion community after the effects of the recession. After such a huge turnout last year, this weekend is sure to see a jam-packed New York City history, which featured models like Gisele Bundchen, Naomi Campbell and Lara Stone working the runway along with 150 other big names.

Texas-based band will play New Brookland Tavern on Saturday

Dignan, whose name comes from director Wes Anderson’s 1996 movie “Bottle Rocks,” is, like the movie character played by Owen Wilson, always up to something. The band is currently on tour for their 2009 full-length album, “Cheaters & Thieves,” all available on iTunes. Though Pena is not the oldest member, he has taken a leadership role in the band both as a co-founder and songwriter, while accord co-founder Garcia does the booking for all of their shows. While they are from Texas, their touring has taken them cross-country multiple times, and has simultaneously built a strong and diverse national fan base.

"It’s the friends you can call up at 4 a.m. that matter.”
- Marlene Dietrich

"I’m not afraid to go places, I just use my imagination.."
- Jim Morrison

"It just seemed like the natural thing," Plueger told The Daily Gamecock in a recent interview. "We all get along, they needed leadership role in the band both as a co-founder and songwriter, while accord co-founder Garcia does the booking for all of their shows. While they are from Texas, their touring has taken them cross-country multiple times, and has simultaneously built a strong and diverse national fan base.

Dignan remains unsigned after completing one full-length album and two EPs, and is trying to grow in popularity.

Acoustic Cafe shines spotlight on aspiring, passionate performers

Plueger describes creating this fan base and having the ability to take their music across the country as the band's greatest challenge. "The whole thing has been hard, not having a label, doing everything ourselves and being on tour with nowhere to sleep or eat," Plueger said. "But we do it because it's the only thing we want to do.

Plueger describes himself simply as indie rock, but cites broad influences such as Arcade Fire, Beach House, The National and even their grandparents' lounge music. With Palomo aiding his talents to a wide array of instruments, including the glockenspiel, accordion, trumpet and tambourine, the band has developed a sound that's able to be at once unique and independent, while also maintaining accessibility to the casual listener.

The band will play at the Homegrown Genius Music, Art and Film Festival in downtown Ninety-Six, S.C., tomorrow, followed immediately by a not-to-be-missed exciting show at New Brookland Tavern that night.

"New Brookland's probably our favorite venue to play," Plueger said. "We have a lot of friends there and it's always a lot of fun for everyone." At New Brookland, they'll be joned by Fireweed Flight, Venus the Robot, I in the Sky, Soft Spot and High Roses for an evening of music. The unaligned band, self-described as previously "DIY" or "do-it-yourself," for the acronym-savvy, is now searching to add a bit more legitimacy to their already-recognized name. They're looking for the right label to help them put out a full-length album, hopefully in late spring of next year. Beyond that, they just want to take their music as far as they can and keep feeling their passion.

Rivalry renews as USC, Georgia square off in SEC opener

Chris Cox
SPORTS EDITOR

THE TEAMS DON’T battle with national championship implications on the line. They don’t inhabit the same state. They’ve never played a game a century has been able to call its own. And no, the band members have never been bowled over as a player runs for a game-winning touchdown.

But despite all that, to call the annual Georgia-South Carolina matchup anything but a rivalry would be a disservice to the epic battles the teams have waged over the past few decades.

“It’s a big rivalry, man,” safety Akeem Auguste said. “They’re talking to us on Facebook and stuff, but there’s just a lot of stuff going on. We’re going to be ready.”

The Bulldogs boast an impressive 46-14-2 advantage in the series over South Carolina, but a closer look at the numbers provide a much more interesting take. Seven of the last nine meetings have been decided by a touchdown or less and the winner generally goes on to have the more successful season between the two clubs, except USC’s win in 2007 after which the team failed to qualify for a bowl, while the Bulldogs raced to an 11-2 record.

“Everybody’s excited. I went home Friday night and was able to watch my high school team play, and everybody was talking about Georgia week and how we’ve got to go out and win,” center T.J. Johnson said. “It’s definitely an exciting time. It’s going to be fun and it’s going to be a great game to watch.”

But what is it that makes the rivalry truly interesting? The wild finishes.

Looking through the history books, there are plenty to choose from. USC fullback Andrew Peacock fumbles at the goal line as time expires in 2002, allowing Georgia to leave Columbia with a 13-7 win. Or 2004, when the Gamecocks blew a 16-0 lead over the No. 3 Bulldogs, who rallied for a 20-16 win. Even in Spurrier’s first season, when a missed extra point by USC kicker Josh Brown allowed Georgia to escape with a 17-15 win in Athens. Had the Gamecocks pulled that victory out, it would have marked USC’s lone Eastern Division title.

Meanwhile, USC’s exclamation points in the closing seconds have been few and far between, save Brandon Bennett diving over...
USC prepares for new-look defense

Grantham's scheme strives to devastate Gamecocks

James Walsh
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

It kept the only undefeated team in professional football history. It made a generation of a coach a bad team. Now, the 3-4 defense is making noise in the SEC. Having considered a scheme almost exclusive to the NFL, the 3-4 has found a high-profile college home thanks to the arrival of defensive coordinator Todd Grantham at Georgia. And while the Bulldogs don't look like the 1972 Miami Dolphins or the New England Patriots teams than Bill Belichick led to three Super Bowl titles yet, they nonetheless are forcing offenses to make adjustments.

"It appears to be quite a bit different," Spurrier said. "They're a really veteran defensive for not knowing what to do. With the extra time we have, a new coach gets a lot of things to install his defense. They had very few mistakes on Saturday against Lafayette.

The 3-4 has never really found much of a footing in the college game because of its personnel demands. With only three down linemen to force foes in the trenches to often play more than one gap, and it requires an elite level of athleticism out of the four-man linemen corps, which must be able to rush the passer and still hang back into coverage.

According to Spurrier, the Bulldogs have demonstrated the ability to do so as the season has worn on. Their defense ends are extremely fast around the edges. They pressure the quarterback, the tackles and I mean almost all the guys are rushing. They're not sitting back, reading zone or anything, " Spurrier said.

"They have stand up rush ends, they have good interior defensive tackles, the scheme forces you to be really smart schematically with the way you attack," Spurrier said. "It has given us a little bit of an advantage, a little edge."

The front line in that battle will be the offensive line — a unit that played average against Southern Miss in the words of its position coach, Shawn Elliott.

"It'll be a big challenge for our offensive line," Elliott said. "That one reverse went for 50-yards. I think their defensive coach would tell you it's not a big deal whether three down linemen, it forces those in the trenches to often play more than three down linemen, it forces those in the trenches to often play more than three down linemen."

"It should be a good game," Elliott said. "We've got some other good receivers of our passing attack to their running game. They have a great passing game. We've got to stop their run game and we've got to stop their passing game."
No. 18 Penn State @ No. 1 Alabama

In the first game since winning the national title, the Alabama Crimson Tide cruised to 49-20 victory without Heisman winner Mark Ingram. As Alabama hosts Penn State this weekend, likely without Ingram once again, it’ll need sophomore Trent Richardson to step up again, having rushed for 66 yards and two touchdowns against South Carolina in his debut.

No. 7 Oregon @ Tennessee

The Oregon Ducks demolished their opening game opponent, winning 72-0 over New Mexico State. With a 21,000-yard passing performance, quarterback Darron Thomas has something to prove for the rest of the season. Under new coach Derek Dooley, the Volunteers won easily over Tennessee-Martin, but several injuries might be an issue. New coach Derek Dooley had his 206 starting quarterback Darron Thomas throw two interceptions and three sacks against State, in which Alabama leads the series 8-5.

No. 12 Miami (FL) @ No. 2 Ohio State

Miami quarterback Jacory Harris will have to prove himself as the new starter, having been thrust into the role following the departure of 2008 Heisman winner Terrelle Pryor. After a forgettable performance against Utah State, where he threw two interceptions after going 17-for-26, Jones needs a big game to keep his team in the title picture.

No. 10 Oklahoma @ No. 17 Florida State

In their first game following the departure of Toby Gerhart, the Volunteers have to defend Oregon’s rushing attack, which Heisman hopeful Terrelle Pryor threw three touchdown passes while running back Brandon Saine ran for 103 yards and two scores against Marshall, but if Ohio State wants to come out on top of its matchup with the Hurricanes, the Buckeyes will have to step up and get pressure on Miami quarterback Jacory Harris. Miami has circled this game not only as a plan for revenge at last season’s 52-17 loss, but also as a possible ACC title game, not only an ACC title hopeful, but a national title hopeful.

No. 11 Penn State @ No. 9 Notre Dame

The Wolverines' sophomore quarterback Denard Robinson ran for 197 yards and a touchdown. While Notre Dame had a tough week, with a broken bone in his left hand, wide receiver Denarius Moore and guard Jarrod Shaw were both listed as questionable. Not only will the Volunteers have to defend Oregon’s running attack, in which Alabama leads the series 8-5, but several injuries might be an issue. New coach Derek Dooley had his 206 starting quarterback Darron Thomas throw two interceptions and three sacks against State, in which Alabama leads the series 8-5.

BYU @ Air Force

After narrowly escaping Washington with a 23-17 victory, BYU needs a strong performance this week. The Falcons defeated Northwestern State last week with a 65-21 blow out and plan to avenge last season’s 38-21 loss to BYU in the Mountain West opener for both teams. BYU has faced six meetings between the two, Air Force would love to win the final meeting between the two teams. BYU’s offensive coordinator, the Mountain West Foes as the Cougars look to go independent on third downs. Air Force can take advantage of BYU’s inexperience at the quarterback position, as the Cougars will play both Jake Heaps and Riley Nelson throughout the game, though BYU’s excellent special teams might be a problem for the Falcons.

South Florida @ No. 8 Florida

After a poor offensive showing against Miami (OH) in which they only had 212 total yards and four turnovers, the Florida Gators look to rebound against the South Florida Bulls. The Bulls cruised in their opening week matchup under new head coach Skip Holtz, winning 59-14 against Stony Brook. While South Florida has shown its ability to have big upssets in recent seasons at Auburn and Florida State, the Gators hope to breathe some life back into the offense, particularly the running game, which averaged just 3.2 yards per carry. Florida’s defense looks to build on last week’s performance under new defensive coordinator Teryl Austin, in which it recorded four interceptions and two sacks.

Sanford @ UCLA

In their first game following the debut of Toby Gerhart, the Stanford Cardinal defeated Sacramento State by a lopsided score of 52-17. This week the Cardinal travel to UCLA where they hope to continue to see production out of quarterback Andrew Luck, who is regarded as one of the best college quarterbacks in the nation. The UCLA Bruins allowed 22-21 loss to Kansas State and will have to step up if they want to restrict Stanford’s loaded offense, which had 929 total yards in its first game. The Bruins offense will need to turn it around as well; both teams have scored against the Cardinals defense held its opposition to under 200 total yards.

Rivalry trophies would breathe life into SEC

Georgia, Carolina destined for Peach Basket glory

A few weeks back I pitched a plan for SEC divisional realignment inspired by the Big Ten and its own foray into the process. I have yet to hear back from Commissioner Mike Slive or anyone inside the league offices in Birmingham.

What I won’t hold my breath waiting for is Slive’s green light, I also won’t abstain from making another Big Ten-inspired suggestion. This time, I’m pitching more tropicals.

The SEC has some, but none with anywhere near the name recognition of the Big Ten rivalries, its games do not get much better than the Little Brown Jug and those Crimson Tide-Auburn boilovers. So, keeping with today’s theme, here are six trophy ideas that could breathe life into SEC intra-divisional rivalries:

USC vs. Georgia: The Peach Basket

The state of Georgia, also known as the Peach State, gets all the credit in the football production department. However, the state of South Carolina yields a much larger crop of SEC talent. Currently, both the Columbia and Charleston areas have larger SEC rosters. USC and South Carolina also have the two most SEC win streaks with all-time totals between 5 and 6 in each state. However, I believe the SEC title was only won by USC in both of those states.

Georgia is buying into this at the moment, answering to a new persona on the field from 2009, answering to a new coaching staff and group of players has been selling this Georgia. Disclaimer: This is coming heavily as, say, another loss to the Gators.

Georgia fans (and some Georgia vs. Tennessee: The Hobnail Boot

Georgia. Disclaimer: This is coming from a non-Georgia fan, but I am drinking the Grambling Kool-Aid right now. After watching the performance Saturday,-barreling the fact that it was a Sun Belt opponent, one cannot help but believe in what this team can do, and group of players has been selling this SEC.
