Bestselling author, famed columnist Gail Collins visits campus Wednesday

The USC police are searching for a suspect who has committed at least five burglaries at four different USC buildings, according to a campus-wide email sent out by USC police. Between March 28 and April 4, the suspect stole wallet and credit cards and identification from a residence hall at Strom Thurmond Wellness and Fitness Center, Blatt Physical Education Center, Strom Thurmond Wellness and Fitness Center and South Quad. Surveillance photos released by police show the suspect, a black male, walking into a Best Buy wearing a hat, blue jacket, dark pants and white shoes. If you have information, you can call Crime Stoppers at 1-888-CRIMESC (374-6872). Calls will remain anonymous, and tips can earn you $1000 in cash.

The theme of this year’s event was superheroes. Teams decorated their tents with themes of “Carolina” in the fight song to a place fans could anticipate it coming and where the fans can impatiently wait for it to off, so only the candle lights were seen illuminating the field. The theme of this year’s event was superheroes. Teams decorated their tents in honor of the superheroes they see in those fighting and recovering from cancer.

The Daily Gamecock won first place in the general excellence category, formerly known as best overall, for the third year in a row Friday at the South Carolina Press Association’s awards ceremony at Winthrop University. Clemson’s The Tiger came in second, and Windsor’s The Johnsonian came in third. Members of local Columbia media outlets judged the awards. Fifteen members of The Gamecock also won awards in 10 specialized categories, including seven first places, four second places and four third places.

The sports and advertising sections swept the awards for the over-5000 circulation division, and dailygamecock.com was named the best college news website.

Every day for the past few months, graduating seniors have woken up early to check USC’s website to see if any positions have been posted. The Flyer will share these positions to ensure that you never miss out on any opportunities.

OK, that may be a bit of an exaggeration, but every senior who is graduating in May has an amazing opportunity to work as a graduation ceremony volunteer. If you volunteer, you will get to see the commencement exercises in all their glory.

University officials announced Friday that Jon Huntsman, the former ambassador to China and recent Republican presidential hopeful, will be the commencement speaker at USC’s commencement ceremony. This is happening because the University of South Carolina is one of the four universities to which Huntsman’s mother contributed money.

Do you think the university is involved in a right-wing conspiracy aimed at gaining support for Huntsman? This is a question only our leaders can answer.

Do you think it is fair to question the motives of this year’s commencement speaker? I personally feel that it is fair and reasonable to question the motives of this year’s commencement speaker.

Monastery and reuniting with the woman he loves.

The story of Rafael, a young monk, who begins to work of art.

is a Spanish lyric opera at its finest. The act visits displayed the theme that there is no song without love.

"La Dolorosa" and "Goyescas" were resounding successes under-appreciated; however, it should be recognized that it should be. While newer forms of musical entertainment there one takes, opera requires an ability to sing, act and even dance at times.

"I think it's an art form that has become increasingly under-appreciated; however, it should be recognized as the art that it truly is," said Krista Fink, a second-year vocal performance graduate student, in the role of Rosario. "For the audience, opera is a form of entertainment that offers you a vast array of emotions at their highest level."

The Columbia community has responded to these productions surprisingly well, filling the School of Music's recital hall.

The professional attitude and tenacity of the performers leads the audience to believe it is much more than a college production.

The USC group brings a unique vigor to the show, pronouncing the Spanish language with ease and fire than some other languages, and I believe that..."

Legeres' first interception came on a short crossing pattern in the first half, while the next came later on a screen pass. The sophomore managed to stay away from the receiver.

"The first one came from over my shoulder. He broke on the route pretty good. It was just an afternoon and I got out too soon," Legere said. "The second one. I knew what route he was running and got out too soon. I really think I wasted the ball there." Legere credits much of his improvement to the veteran leadership of the secondary, particularly in the mental aspects of the game.

Shaw, quarterbacks focus of Garnet and Black Game with Garcia out

Ryan Velasquez
THE DAILY GAMECOCK

Just three days after Stephen Garcia was suspended from the team indefinitely, all eyes were on South Carolina's other four quarterbacks during Saturday's Garnet and Black Game.

Rather than providing answers, however, USC's sorts left many asking more questions following the Garnet team's 21-17 victory.

"Our quarterbacks have got a lot to learn," said coach Steve Spurrier. "They aren't there yet, but we think they can get there with the right coaching and the right mental approach." Spurrier wrote his halftime talk on the only drawing of the four.

Drawing the most scrutiny of the four was sophomore Connor Shaw, who spent 2010 backing up Garcia while registering three tackles and two interceptions. I'd expect nothing less of him," Spurrier said. "They aren't there yet, but we think they can get there with the right coaching and the right mental approach." Spurrier wrote his halftime talk on the only drawing of the four.

"I thought I played pretty decent," Shaw said. "There were some times that I overthrew some receivers that I could have, but overall it was a good experience. I thought I did pretty well." Shaw's day surprisingly came to an end after the second quarter, reportedly from being overheated.

"He got cramps or heat dehydration, so he was finished at halftime," Spurrier said. "He's in good shape, so I don't think it's anything serious."

Smith stars with three scores

Isabelle Khurshudyan
THE DAILY GAMECOCK

DeAngelo Smith didn't have a lot to say for someone on the receiving end of three touchdowns in Saturday's Garnet and Black Game.

"It feels pretty good," Smith said. "The past two years I've been hurt, so this year I just want to be out here playing football and try to make the starting team."

Smith caught a 62-yard pass from Dylan Thompson for the Garnet squad in the first play of its opening drive. The redshirt sophomore then moved over to the Black team, where he racked up 32 yards and two touchdowns. Smith led both units in receiving yards for the game.

Smith is behind star receiver Alshon Jeffery on the depth chart, so it remains uncertain as to what his role will be at Garnet and Black.

"He has really developed into an outstanding receiver, but he came from Georgia," said assistant head coach Shane Beamer. "He's in good shape, so I don't think it's anything serious."
