The Carolina Investment Fund, at its restructured, with the formation industry. Students invest funds, network through finance club and be in attendance. Wilkerson was out of town Wednesday evening and could not attend senate, Student Body Vice President Ryan Bailey said. Senate Vacancies Free voting for current vacant, with one being sought by two people. The office leader had a seat vacant each in the College of Hospitality, Retail and Spur Management; the School of Law; the School of Music; and the College of Pharmacy. One student has also applied to be a senator in the delegation from the Moore School, although two seats open, and two students have applied to fill it. The Carolina Investment Association will feed its members that new students understand how to work on Wall Street. The group's focus is to bridge the gap of what we learn in school and what we do in the real world," Terefenko said. "The group's goal is to expand our network and build relationships with other students and the community. We want to foster a sense of community and our students will have the opportunity to experience the financial world beyond the classroom," Terefenko said. The Carolina Investment Association has been in the news management group, the Carolina Investment Fund, at its head. What's the best practice for a job on Wall Street? Managing money, of course. Real money. Students who join the Carolina Investment Association have the opportunity to invest funds in real life because of what they learn at the end of the year. The organization has been in existence since the school has been restructured, with the formation of a money management group, the Carolina Investment Fund, at its head.

like Miss South Carolina, which is part of the Miss America Organization. She competed in that pageant in 2011 as Miss Greater Irmo. She made it into the top 15.

With her heels hung up and the crown not far behind, Pinckney is looking forward to some traditional college fun.

"I was joking earlier with my friends, ‘At least I came back in the fall, so I have football,’” Pinckney said. She’s made sure none of her Miss South Carolina USA events will conflict with home games.

This time last year, Pinckney was hard at work preparing for the statewide pageant, where she won the title representing James Island.

"Last season, I was still getting ready for the pageant, so I couldn’t go to tailgates and enjoy the tailgate food. I’m excited to get fat again,” Pinckney said jokingly. "I’m excited not to have to worry about what I’m eating and not to have to get up extra early for the gym on game days.”

MTV held its annual Video Music Awards Sunday, despite the delusion that Television is dead. It hasn’t been a music video among their volumes of reality shows and mind-numbing melodrama, campy and cliche television in years. The reality of MTV, the awesomeness of a video, was viewed by over 100 million people. It was impressive for cable.

The most discussed music video of the night was the performance of Miley Cyrus, a former Disney star who has grown into a substantial sex symbol, though performer, in a generous definition of the term. Her performance was overtly sexual and was not a fan, but was not unexpected and has drawn unfair criticism and slamming. Reaction has been swift and critical to its sexual nature. MSNBC’s Mike Barnowski called it “degrading” and suggested that Cyrus had an affair with his mother of Robin Thicke, who, Miley performed with (and literally on). As it turns out, the shift in tone is encouraging and long overdue. In years past, we’ve seen the police ramp up these patrols and hasten the rate at which they are redefining their focus, but usually only because of violence in the streets, freed gunshots and the like. If they could have increased their efforts, they’d be warned that they would still keep an eye on the larger drug-like, like IDs and the other hallmarks of college nightlife. That won’t change entirely.

“We hope they’ll hold on to their goal of quelling violent crime resulting from Five Points’ problem, not crime, not students.”

Police smart to focus on gangs, violent crime

In children, our parents are responsible for making sure that we (relatively) healthy and get the full, rounded diet that our bodies need for growth. Our parents make those decisions for us because we’re too young to know any better, and would likely eat nothing but cake and ice cream if we were allowed to.

Now that we’re in college, the only real ‘prescription’ to our diet is our price range. Most of us shop for convenience and luxury on our own to the time we end up in the kitchen and decide what we’ll eat now.

Fashion blogger gives the do’s and don’ts of football attire

Katie Cole

It’s hot, it’s loud and everyone around you is probably getting a little bit rowdy. You know what that means. The first Gamecock football game is tonight, and if you’re freaking out about what to wear, don’t worry. You’ve got a few options if you’re a girl, and if you’re a guy, you’ve got maybe one or two.

Girls: Dress Options
In the Southeastern Conference, we like to dress up our game day fashion basically as big as a deal as a Sunday morning brunch, but with a lot more celebration and a lot less business. If you’re a girl, going with a basic dress is an easy option. Your host will be a little black dress (LBD), but make sure it’s made of material you can brush in. Heavy materials will make you sweat more and are guaranteed to make you more tightly held. Another dress option is a garnet and black dress. Note the color is garnet, not red. If you wear red, you will most definitely be known as a Georgia fan, and it won’t go over very well. If you think it doesn’t really look like garnet, probably doesn’t.

So skipp it and go with black if you have one. A garnet and black printed dress is always fun, and they sell plenty of them in Five Points boutiques. A white-and-black dress is also a classic. Even though white does really play into our school color system, it’s apparently become acceptable. So if you have one, you go for it.

Guys: The Essential Shirt
If you’re a guy dressing for the game, you’re going to be wearing khaki shorts. You can’t afford to wear them in a fraternity or not, it’s basically standard for guys. But the color of your shirt is of some sort. But khaki isn’t necessary, if you have nice shirts of some other material. You can have two of one options on top, both classic collared shirts. Wear a gold shirt that’s black or garnet (stick to solid colors; it works better), and if possible, have the South Carolina logo on it somewhere. If not, that’s OK, because a classic garnet or black shirt will still be a hit.

If you feel so inclined, you can pair a South Carolina hat with a plain white or gray t-shirt, because they look better than a plain khaki cap, for some reason.

Again, the garnet isn’t-must rule applies. Garnet is a different color than red.

Girls Separates
The other options for girls on gameday are separates: A nice top paired with a skirt or shorts.

No, shorts do not mean the booty shorts you bought in middle school that you decided to bring to college. Those have a time and place, and when everyone is generally dressed up on gameday, they are not a good option.

Again, the colors remain the same. You can either do an all-black ensemble or opt for different colored tops and bottoms. Flowy tops that allow breathing room are the best option when the Carolina heat is in full force, and tight material for your skirt or shorts is also a good idea. There’s always a list of room to accessorize too; a bubble necklace or stack of bracelets is a fun way to make your outfit stand out. You’re going to want to pair a pair of sunglasses, too, for tailgating, because it will be bright out.

Guys: The Button Down
Another option for guys is putting on gameday is button downs. Every guy looks good in a button down, no matter what. It can be short-sleeved or long-sleeved with the sleeves rolled up, but the same rule still applies: This is gameday, and no one wants to see a USC student wearing non-USC colors. If you’re going to opt for the button down, accessorize with a low tie, if you feel so inclined (and ladies do love a good bow tie).

Footwear
As for footwear, don’t wear anything you haven’t broken in yet. Make sure you pick shoes that match your outfit and that you feel comfortable standing in all day. This is not the day to break in your new cowboy boots, ladies. If you’ve already broken them in, great. If not, there is always a cute pair of black flats or nice sandals waiting to be worn in your closet.

As for guys, boat shoes are always acceptable gameday footwear.

Make sure to pack on some sunscreen, pack your sunglasses and, of course, your tickets.

The first football game really gets the school year going, and you want to be dressed your best. First impressions are everything, right?

Dobinrose Productions drops new mixtape

In 2010, USC students watched, shared and went crazy over a video that epitomized what it means to be a Gamecock fan and sold their mixtape, “Kiss on With your Gamecock,” for just $5.

Now, nearly three years later, the same group has brought not only a new video, but also an entire mixtape, just in time for fall.

“We wanted to do a more official video,” said Fabio Frey, co-creator and co-founder of Dobinrose Productions. “We wanted to take it the next level.”

That’s exactly what Frey and Thompson, the other half of the creative duo, did.

“Faye My Team (Forever Till We Die),” the newest YouTube sensation from the South Carolina mixtape, is a musical ode to South Carolina football’s past, present and future.

The song, which is one of 10 tracks off of their upcoming album, creatively merges the sounds of the Gamecock Mixtapes, features regularly rappers Big Hugs, SmokeARS, KevV, and others.

Along with the musical talent, the new video features plenty of Gamecock fans, beautiful views of Columbia and even a live tiger.

The pair said they wanted to go out with a bang.

“We want this to be something people are still thinking about in the fall, when USC is doing better than the other teams,” Thompson said.

And to those who may try to top them, their message is simple: best of luck.

“They are the South Carolina Swag, and Gamecock Swag. T-shirts have brought them national recognition, a slow of fans and the possibility that a clip of the video will be played as a football game, but they don’t quite forget to forget that they started it all.

“The at the end of the day, we’re just really big Gamecock fans,” Frey said.

“You can’t imagine going out to games, Thompson added. “I’ll be a Gamecock fan until I die.”
