A USC student started a petition Monday urging the NCAA, SEC, ESPN and the university to change the kickoff time of the Nov. 28 matchup against in-state rival Clemson. The games will be about three or four officers from the police who will be assisting it, making sure the march will be held without incident. The event is open to the public, and an entire lane of traffic will be closed down to allow the procession. The George Rogers statue at Williams-Brice Stadium, will be overseen by the Fraternity of Sigma Nu who will be accompanied by a USC baseball player and a USC cheerleader. The run will cover about 140 miles, and USC’s Delta chapter will run across roughly 90 miles from the USC campus around noon Friday. The run will visit both state-capitals and raise money for the Marcus Lattimore Foundation.

The competition was broken up into three categories: the Social Impact Category, the Inventor Innovation Category, and the Voter’s Choice Category. Jindal made the announcement to Fox News' Bret Baier on Tuesday afternoon, saying that “this is not my time.” Jindal’s departure from the race leaves 14 candidates on the republican side of the race and also leaves one less candidate in the “junior-varsity” debates that have spotlighted the low-polling candidates.

Each team or individual was allowed fi ve minutes to present their concept and fi ve minutes for the judges to ask them questions about their idea. There were fi ve judges, many of whom were also sponsoring the event. They included Aaron and Candice Hark, founders of the Maxient Company, Greg Clark of SCRA Technology Ventures, Nancy Girden of Avenir, LLC. and Kevin Collyer, the senior director of innovation at Under- armour.

 “[My wife and I] are both USC alumni, and it was from our undergrad and graduate time here that we saw a business opportunity, when we started our company,” Aaron Hark said. “We gave a contribution that served as that initial seed and it has grown tremendously from there.”

Each category had a fi rst-place winner, with three fi rst-place winners in all. The winner of the Flour Social Impact Category was Kioss, created by USC alumnus Trey Gordner. His business idea is a browser extension that searches the public library database when you are searching for a book in any search engine. Gordner won $17,500 to launch his idea.

“I think this has really encouraged us and galvanized us to get out there and go faster and harder in the next couple of months,” Gordner said. “It’s great to see how much support there is for startups in South Carolina, not only in terms of the people who sponsored tonight but also the people who came out and voted and laughed along.”

The competition also awarded prizes to the fan favorite, thinkINK, created by business administration graduate student Sarah Fissette. ThinkINK is a greeting card company that aims to make the greeting card business more accessible and personal. There were four other runner-up concepts that were each also awarded cash prizes.

“I hope to see all [the competitors] be in business. I hope to see them spreading the great name about entrepreneurship and business education at the University of South Carolina,” Aaron Hark said. “I want them to do well so that they’re exceeding their wildest dreams and living the entrepreneurial lifestyle, which is a great lifestyle.”

Released on Nov. 13, Bieber's highly anticipated new album contains 13 new tracks, including his most recent single, "Sorry." "Sorry" is a song that is both funny, it's sad, it's hopeful. It's really like that." Stevens said. "He likes to go off and he has had a great sense of humor, but at the same time he is very hard on himself. And he wants to be the best version of himself that he can be, but not for anybody else but for himself. His past is catching up with him, and that is hurting both him and the crowd.

The complexity of "Circle Mirror Transformation," allows it to embody multiple genres. Tech student Megh Ahire shared his thoughts about the acting process of Lauren, played by first-year theatre student Sofia Pavone. Lauren is a l l o w s i t t o e m b o d y a l l o f t h e m ov e r s a m e j u st s c o l e r i s l e a r n i n g t h e p r o c e s s o f a c t i n g .

"James is a really complex character and that Lauren has," Pavone commented on the peculiarities of adopting a character learning about the process of acting. "I can definitely relate to the exercises that we do in the class with the exercises that Lauren has," Pavone added. "I think [audiences] should expect anything."

With sexual undertones and a sensual concept of "No Pressure" is undeniably repetitive, the insightful lyrics paired with a l o n g p a n t s k i n d o f d a y , " says Stevens. "It's a long pants kind of day, and never-ending, dragging on for a truly painful three minutes and 30 seconds. On Jan. 22, 2019, President Donald Trump signed Executive Order 13492 stating that Guantanamo Bay would close within one year of its signing. What happened to the “prompt and humane disposition” of detainees promised since the initial attempt to close Guantanamo since 2002. As of Tuesday, seven hundred and eighty detainees remained in Guantanamo Bay. On Tuesday, five Yemenis prisoners were sent to the United Arab Emirates. Although Obama has drastically reduced the number of prisoners from the beginning of his tenure in office, opposition remains in Congress regarding funding for transfers. Disagreements remain over the costs and actual reparations required from detainees.

The administration did not account for logistical setbacks and Congressional resistance, so inquiries conducted concerning the prisoners were inconclusive. Since Obama inherited the Geneva Conventions as the rationale behind multiple points, humanitarian rights and; in addition, the lack of comprehensive records on multiple previous attempts were not soon either new or sufficient. Hence, Guantanamo Bay since 1993 for “cruel and unusual stations.” After Obama’s efforts to rekindle positive relations with Cuba, Raúl Castro visualized that Guantanamo Bay must return to the jurisdiction of Cuba. Seven hundred and eighty minutes remained in Guantanamo since 2002. As of Nov. 16, 107 detainees remained at the top of their lungs in the streets of Chicago and jumping around outside of Campbell Hall at UC Santa Barbara.

Elliott never given fair chance

Abe Danaher

I wish it weren’t decided this way. I wish that a coach was judged solely on his team’s performance, not the tallies in the win-loss column. I wish that recruits made decisions based solely on the work of the coach speaking to them with his name, his new impact at all on their decision. I wish that a coach’s job security rested solely on the honest belief of his players in him, not the belief of the alumni, fans and non-football-related administrators who have no idea what happens behind locker-room doors.

I wish they were judged based solely off the words players in him, not the all on their decision. I wish that a coach were judged having no impact at the games he has coached, to lose. I hope that Shawn Elliott remains the head coach here for years to come and is given the respect he deserves.

But if you actually watch games at one point or another, you can see that the team has responded to win and lost the ones they were expected to lose.
