Eight candidates hoping to represent the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences in the upcoming Coker Life Sciences Building debate were left out of the televised debate. The candidates were not invited to participate in the televised debate because the debate was only open to those who had been pre-approved by student government.

"If I can't make a change point, but said that through my finger into the audience, as I was addressing the student senate gathered Thursday night to debate the \"peace\" event. Parker Khan, secretary of MSA and a third-year international-studies student, spearheaded the event. Khan said the meeting was not supposed to be about the Pastafarianism, which is generally accepted by many. But, he has no idea that pastafarianism is a religion," Cederhal said. "We need to eliminate that pretense from the senate. We need to eliminate that exercise at being pretentious."

"Some students felt that the work is not for anyone involved with both RHA and Student Government. \"Happy St. Valentine's Day Special\" from the best chick through the day.

"We were a little disappointed with the school debate on Monday against Duke. Students were talking to each other about recent events, such as the UNC game against Duke. Many of the students felt proud about the game. \"I'm really excited. I\'ve never been to such a great meeting of such groups. I think we should definitely have more of these,\" said Darren Dries, an MSA member and second-year student.

"We are a great group of people and make friends despite the fact that the general two sides have had their issues and tensions in the past,\" Reisman said. As for future meetings and social gatherings, MSA secretary Khan is taking the process one step at a time. "I\'m thinking about it. We are united after all for nearly 20 years or more," Reisman said. "This is the way the world needs to be."

Burlington, Iowa — Inmates at the Des Moines County Jail in Burlington may have to begin paying for toilet paper. The county is facing a more than $1 million deficit in this year's budget and the Board of Supervision gave department heads the option of cutting costs or facing the possibility of unpaid furloughs or layoffs.

Police catch suspect through DNA on dougnut

Bloomington, Ind. — Police believe a church burglary has been solved through DNA found on a half-eaten dougnut. A 22-year-old man was charged with burglary in the January 2007 break-in at Woodhaven Christian Church. Police said a number of musical instruments were taken, along with a box of doughnuts in the church's kitchen. A 19-year-old woman noticed and noticed a bite had been taken from one of the dougnuts.

From a South Carolina sheriff is searching an alleged marijuana case against swimming superstar Michael Phelps, it might be hard to make the charges stick, defense attorneys say. The case took a turn Thursday, when lawyers for two people said their clients were among eight people arrested last week who were associated with the USC party where Phelps was photographed smoking from a bong. At the time, the men were renters at the house. Lawyers for the two men say they were questioned almost exclusively about Phelps and charged with marijuana possession.

Attention to Saints' needs is a key concern

St. Louis — The Archbishop of St. Louis, Most Rev. John F. Wester, said 2009 is a year of opportunity for the Archdiocese of St. Louis. The archbishop's annual letter, released Thursday, said the archdiocese faces a number of challenges, including a $2.6 million deficit in its 2009 budget. The archbishop said the archdiocese will continue to work toward fiscal sustainability and to build a stronger and more vibrant Catholic Church in the St. Louis area.

The effort to prosecute Phelps on what would be at most a minor drug charge seems extreme compared to similar cases, lawyers said, and have led some to question whether the sheriff is being overzealous because he's dealing with a celebrity. Lincoln, Darwin prove great heroes deserve of gaining due recognition

The day I am writing this column, February 12, is a day in support of President Abraham Lincoln. On this day 202 years ago, Abraham Lincoln and Charles Darwin were born. Who do you think is the great scientist who developed the theory of natural selection? Charles Darwin, of course. The celebrations surrounding the anniversary of both men’s births highlights our persistent appeal of heroism.

President Obama has been given no opportunity to emulate Lincoln, constantly offered files to review and modeling his inaugural celebration after Lincoln. His administration is well aware of the great titles that relate to our current leader. It is, of course, true that what President Obama does is emulate the greats. In the words of Lincoln and Darwin, Al Sharpton maintains today commemorating the benevolent nature of the heroes. For us, it is important to emphasize the contributions of these men.

But is this tendency to fixate on the past a way to avoid facing our present? The currents of Lincoln and Darwin tell us that people will always be attracted to outstanding individuals and that these are the true heroes of humanity. The heroes can do with a little bit of hard work and purpose.

It is a great honor for any teacher to be asked to give the commencement address at the University of South Carolina. Abraham Lincoln and Charles Darwin were asked to give commencement addresses at the University of Cambridge. These two leaders were asked to give the commencement address because of their achievements in their fields.

In the end, there’s probably a great deal of heroism, and nothing they can do with a little bit of hard work and purpose.

We also invite student leaders to get involved with the Pastafarians. The Pastafarians have set the bar for what a student organization can do with a little bit of hard work and purpose. We hope more student organizations can accomplish the same.

Students should fight cuts

South Carolina needs to change priorities save, improve education

We’ve all heard the news. USC is in the midst of a massive budget crisis after having lost more state funding than any other state university.

This is a problem that doesn’t have to be fixed. It is a problem that can be solved. It is a problem that we need to get involved with.

So why fight for it?

Every student has a right to a college education. If you want to get involved, there are a few things you should know.

In the past few months, student senators have passed legislation to provide a voice for you during the funding crunch. One resolution sought to regain money lost from programs like PASCAL, the service that allows you to get library books from across the state. Another requested student oversight to ensure responsible spending by the administration, and the latest initiated a student loan of the typical relaxation that the senate is looking for you. But it certainly doesn’t have to do with the students. The students in this context are defined as the student group, intramurals, and other student associations. They are the groups that will be long forgotten once the student’s work is done. It is a sign to scrutiny and scandal that will be long forgotten once the student’s work is done. It is a sign to scrutiny and scandal that will be long forgotten once the student’s work is done.

For example, other scientists who contributed to the study of evolution will be long forgotten once the student’s work is done. It is a sign to scrutiny and scandal that will be long forgotten once the student’s work is done.

In the end, there’s probably a great deal of heroism, and nothing they can do with a little bit of hard work and purpose.

It’s your right

The Daily Gamecock encourages our readers to voice opinions and offers a forum for debate. Letters and guest columns are limited to three people. Opinions expressed in these columns do not necessarily reflect those of the University of South Carolina. The Board of University of South Carolina and the Daily Gamecock stand together in support of a free press.

Both students and Columbia community members were in a “multipurpose organization for atheists, agnostics, skeptics and free-thinkers.” The Pastafarians have set the bar for what a student organization can do with a little bit of hard work and purpose. We hope more student organizations can accomplish the same.

For two years junior forward Dominique Archie has played out of position. For two years Archie has lined up in the post down low because of a lack of team post presence. For two years he has been the Gamecocks best rebounder, something that at the Colonial Life Arena would be like being the forward with the best rebounding skills as a team. Since the development of sophomore forwards Mike Holmes and Sam Muldrow USC coach Darrin Horn has been able to ease both Archie’s and Gamecock fans’ woes by moving the 6-7 forward to the small forward position in which he truly belongs.

The importance of that move will be apparent this Saturday when the Gamecocks travel to Tuscaloosa, Ala. to take on the Crimson Tide.

"We've moved Archie out to the wing too," Horn said. "So, we’ll see how that match up is a good one.

With Archie defending Gee and junior guard Devan Downey, who is first in the SEC in steals, keeping Alabama’s second leading scorer, sophomore guard Hillary Sunier under control it would be easy for Horn and company to overlook the Crimson Tide, especially considering Alabama’s 1-19 record. However, to Horn the importance of that move will be apparent this Saturday.

"Then Sunday, we were lackadaisical, maybe too complacent. The Gamecocks played with enthusiasm and excitement," Compton said.

"I think Gee's a terrific player," Horn said. "I think that his size on the wing is something that is an advantage for him.

There is no doubt that few players have the ability to match up with Gee. His ability to score from long range, he leads his team in three pointers, and to reach the hoop creates a tough situation for any defender. However, thanks to Archie’s relocation, Horn is confident about his team’s ability to keep Gee’s output to a minimum.

"We’ve moved Archie out to the wing too," Horn said. "So, we’ll see how that match up is a good one."

However, as the season progresses Horn is requiring that his players remain focused on the task at hand. Even though he has already topped his predecessor’s SEC win total with seven conference games on the schedule Horn has made sure to keep improvement and winning at the forefront of his mind.

"How are they going to respond the day after? Do we need to..."

The women’s basketball team dropped their fifth consecutive game last night 85-64 in a tight battle with the Arkansas Razorbacks. The loss drops the Gamecocks to 8-15 for the season and 2-9 in SEC play. Junior forward Lashara Sutton once again led the team with 15 points and five rebounds.

The clash of two lower SEC teams saw Arkansas even in all aspects of the game but the Razorbacks were simply able to make more plays down the stretch, which helped them get the win.

"I think it’s a matter of us continuing to go out on a daily basis and on a game-by-game basis and performing in a way that we give ourselves an opportunity to win," Horn said.

The Gamecocks could have a bright light at the end of their tunnel as their toughest remaining games almost all come at home, a fact that Tennessee coaches Bruce Pearl said gave USC “a definite advantage,” in the SEC East race. However, there is still a lot of basketball to be played and many things could change. Horn remains confident in his team no matter which way its fortunes turn.

"I think this team has shown a lot of toughness all year," Horn said. "They’ve shown a desire to play well and the way their focus is great."

Saturday game starts at 1 p.m. and will be televised by Raycom Sports.
Hancock returns to track

Junior sprinter making triumphant comeback from old injury

By Zachary Arnett

As the Gamecock track and field teams prepare for a trip to Fayetteville, Ark., this weekend for the Tyson International Invitational, they are still waiting for six-time All-American Jason Richardson to return from a hamstring injury.

Richardson has not competed since the 2008 Indoor SEC Championships.

“I hope to have him next week here at home,” head coach Curtis Frye said. “I mentioned that for Richardson is to have him back in time for the Indoor SEC Championships in Lexington, Ky., though, having him back for the Gamecock Online Invitational scheduled for Feb. 21 would be ideal so he could compete before he is ready to go full strength.

“It gives you a better drive and makes you more hungry when you do have him back on the track,” Richardson said.

Richardson has already qualified for the NCAA Championships in Lexington, Ky., though, having him back for the Gamecock Online Invitational scheduled for Feb. 21 would be ideal so he could compete before he is ready to go full strength.

While Richardson rests, redshirt junior Johnathan Hancock is back from an injury suffered his sophomore year.

Hancock is learning the tougher mental aspects of sitting out of his athletic competition, which is an integral part of our personality,” Richardson said.

The lesson Richardson is learning is one which Hancock already knows very well.

“It is one of the worst feelings from an athlete’s point of view, but you still want to root for the team and be supportive,” Hancock said.

Currently on the rise, Hancock ran a personal best in the 60m dash at the New Balance Collegiate Indoor Invitational last weekend in Lawrence, Mass.

“It is just one of those things where you are glad to be back on the track to prove everybody wrong who said you couldn’t do it,” Hancock said.

Hancock is a sprinter who came into USC with high expectations as a student [who] graduated in 2008.

Injury late in his sophomore year of high school and a another injury when he returned for his junior year has slowed his development, but he feels that Hancock is now developing as he had hoped it would have if it has taken a longer time.

“I think it takes some people longer to buy into transition,” John is a great student [who] graduated in 2008 and three and a half years and

SEC schedule tells same old difficult story for Gamecocks

USC’s 2009 lineup may be one of most difficult in decades

The USC football team has played a difficult football schedule annually since they joined the SEC in 1992, and the 2009 football season will be no exception. I suppose you could say that the upcoming slate of football games for the Gamecocks is a “doisy” even when compared to the schedules from the past 17 years.

USC will open the 2009 season with two road games. The second road game will be against Arkansas, a Thursday night non-conference matchup against the Wolfpack on ESPN. USC barely defeated North Carolina State last season 44-14, but the Wolfpack rallied back to finish the season with eight straight losses to the national champions (over Duke, UNC, Wake Forest and Miami) and a trip to the Sugar Bowl. USC beat NC State 50-14 in the New Balance Collegiate Indoor Invitational in Columbia, though, finished the season with 17 passing touchdowns and only one interception. The Wolfpack should prove to be much tougher competition than they were last year, especially considering this game will be on the road.

The second road game will be against SEC East rival Vanderbilt in the Music City Bowl. The Commodores finished last season with eight wins, that may be cause to celebrate.
