EPI celebrates 30 years teaching

Students with the Methodist Student Network take part in a service project on a mission trip to Peru.

Michelle Whittington, a first-year political science student, was drawn to EPI because of the diversity. “They bring students together like a family to worship God.” Whittington said. “It’s not like the ordinary church.”

While the group reaches out to international students on campus and often serves abroad, they also try to help third-world nations from here in Columbia. “We want to support developing countries as much as possible,” Wright said. This year they have done just that, partnering with Ten Thousand Villages, a nonprofit organization that helps artisans from around the world sell their goods at fair wages in the United States.

MSN hosted a table at Russell House to help sell the merchandise. Wright said it was “an act of solidarity” with the people in the developing world. She encourages everyone to visit www.tenthousandvillages.org to support the organization if they were unable to purchase anything at Russell House.

According to Wright, all students are welcome to attend services or seek out service opportunities with EPI. “You don’t have to be a Christian, we offer an environment that is accepting to all religions, Wright said. “We are open to discussion and having a heart change.”

Methodist Student Network has a weekly Sunday service at 6 p.m. in the Campus Ministries Center on Pickens Street. There is a meal served after the service.

FOOD DRIVE TARGETS UF

Organizations, universities collaborate to fight hunger

Derek Logaster

The “Beat Florida” food drive went into full action this Thursday on the second floor of the Russell House.

“We are here to give back to the community, since we are a part of it,” said Cynthia Steele, marketing manager of Carolina Dining. Carolina Dining, the University Housing, Student Government and other organizations on campus decided to work together for the three-day event to instill the need to collect as much food and canned goods as possible to feed the homeless.

Steele says they also have carnival-like games available to everyone in the Russell House Ballroom. Five tickets to play the games cost five dollars. There are several different games available to the students, including Bag Toss, Duck Toss, Spin Away Hunger and Duck Hunger, Duck Hunger, Spin Away Hunger and Duck Hunger.

Jamie Seavey, a first-year business student, enthusiastically waited in line to play one of the games. “It’s a great cause and process,” he said. “Overall just a lot of fun, and it’s great to get everyone involved.”

However, the imperfect weather did change how things went down.

“You’d wish that it wouldn’t rain, but we should have one bus full of food so that’s good and we wanted to make it fun for everybody,” Steele said.

Originally, the event was supposed to be outside the Russell House, but only two buses and the man handing out free卓涂 were available to everyone in the Russell House.

“It’s too bad that we couldn’t have better weather, but it’s still a good thing,” said Mike Gowanacki, one of the men working outside.

“Even it’s only $10, it’s for a good cause and a fun free situation.”

Steele said other events, such as Battles of the Halls and Selling Helping Hands, are going on to collect as much food as possible. However, the food going to the Harvest Hope Food Center is all that matters, Steele said.

“We hope that this will become bigger and bigger so that people don’t have to worry about when their next meal is,” she said.
The Vatican gets internet lessons

VATICAN CITY — Vatican officials and Catholic bishops are getting a lesson on the Internet from Facebook, Wikipedia and Google executives as the church struggles to get its message out in the digital age.

A four-day symposium in the Vatican which opened Thursday also will address Internet copyright issues and hacking — including testimony from a young Swiss hacker and an Interpol cyber-crime official.

The meeting is being hosted by the European bishops’ commission on mission and planned to delve into questions about what Internet culture means for the church’s mission and how the church communicates that mission to others.

Pope Benedict XVI has tried to bring the Vatican into the Internet age and launched a YouTube channel earlier this year. Officials say he also e-mails and surfs the Web. But the Vatican’s online shortcomings have been mercilessly apparent.

Earlier this year, Benedict made clear he was not impressed if Vatican officials hadn’t done a simple Internet search to discover the Holocaust-denying comments of an ultracommunist bishop before he posted the pontiff’s letter to him.

The outrage over the rehabilitation of Bishop Richard Williamson, a member of the Society of Jesus, who denied the Holocaust, led Benedict to promise in February to look into how the Vatican’s Internet communications apparatus had floundered.

Recall that the Vatican website had no search function, not even Google’s, when this year’s sex abuse scandal broke.

Boeing nuts like to say mixed martial arts isn't a sport. They say it lacks strategy, skill, and talent. If a boxing nut sat in a cage with a BJJ nut, they'd fight to the death.

Then Ed kill chums in the freaking head. Why? For two reasons. He's the only reason. They're both in dog-like shape. "Wow, kicking people in the head is flipping sweet! Boxing is just more real, if you're not good enough you're gonna get your ass beat up."

A Johns Hopkins University study found that the knockout rate in boxing is much higher than in MMA. Knockouts are concussions. Gary S. Solomon, "The Heads-Up on Sports Concussion," says there have been 1,500 boxing deaths since 1880. In MMA, a sport that has been around a long time, there have been three very recent fatalities, all of which occurred in unsanctioned events. Who's more mortal? You are who you hang with.

Another reason fighters say boxing is better is the only way to do the fight is head on. You can't say "wait, I'm gonna get my chest on the cage, let's do it different!"

Furthermore, boxing has killed many of its fans. "You're going to find someone who's going to knock out 20 people in a row," Steele said. "You're going to find the person who's going to be able to take a punch and doesn't lose."

As for strategy, boxing isn't how humans actually fight. Well, start one at the closet. The closest real fight to boxing is a bust of a fistfights in an Irish pub, and the participants in said fight are very drunk. Despite holding the inability to see straight, MMA presents a more real combat situation.

But football and soccer don't "suit" real world combat either. In MMA comes its bringing in an eclectic group of fighting styles and techniques from kickboxing, Muay Thai, karate, jujitsu, sambo and many others — and tests which has the ability to adapt to different situations, which is what makes boxing more stupid. A Muay Thai fighter and a taw kwon do would be afraid to take a punch to the face, whereas a Muay Thai fighter in the cage is going to fight against one another? MMA answers that question.

Sure, jujitsu is a staple of MMA, because MMA is stealing the ratings and saying MMA isn't a real sport. We don't just say "punch, roundhouse kick, and soccer taekwondo aren't sports!"

How about all this in the ring? You can only use your head and hands?! That's the only way to make boxing better! We followed him to his world, and new era of boxing, and we saw these top matches.

The public would see these top matches. Whether you want to make boxing better, or make MMA better, the public would see these top matches.

If boxing implements the necessary changes that make MMA popular and relevant, then we could see a resurgence in boxing popularity.
Q. Tell us about your style.

A. I’ve never dressed ‘down’, that’s not my thing. Casual is usually not in my fashion vocabulary. My style changes frequently, just as fashions do. I’m a very chic-meets-edgy, almost always on point. Katy Perry and Lady Gaga have been popping up in my fashion craze lately – using a bit of color — always makes a classic look. And of course, the Smoky eye — using a bit of color — always makes a classic look.

Q. And what are you wearing today?

A. My dress, tights and boots are from bebe, my jacket is from Juicy Couture! I’m a loyal fan of their leather goods — especially the jackets. My dress, tights and boots are from bebe, my jacket is from Juicy Couture! I’m a loyal fan of their leather goods — especially the jackets.

Q. What beauty tips would you like to share?

A. Keep your skin and nails glowing with a healthy diet, fresh water, and a daily regimen including a cleanser, toner, and moisturizer. Yuck. Prints are OK, just no more red plaid. I don’t like it. Prints are OK, just no more red plaid. I don’t like it. Prints are OK, just no more red plaid. I don’t like it. Prints are OK, just no more red plaid. I don’t like it.

Q. If you could have a free shopping spree at any store, which one would you pick and why?

A. Jucy Couture! I’m a loyal fan of their leather goods — especially the jackets. My dress, tights and boots are from bebe, my jacket is from Juicy Couture! I’m a loyal fan of their leather goods — especially the jackets. My dress, tights and boots are from bebe, my jacket is from Juicy Couture! I’m a loyal fan of their leather goods — especially the jackets.

Q. Do you think girls today dress up more often to catch the attention of a guy, or do you think guys generally just pay more attention to the average girl? It’s all about the dress. I feel that that all depends on the relationship status. For hair, short bobs and pixies are in. For long hair, bangs are definitely a good alternative and are hot right now. Makeup is good neutral all over. Dark tints on the lips are definitely making a statement. For nails, take a cue from Charlotte Russe and bebe.

Q. How has your style changed, much over the years?

A. Yes, very much so. In middle school my fashion sense was scoured by boys’ clothes to dress cute! In high school, I found myself and began to dress more in heels. Throughout college, I dress for the occasion whether there is an occasion or not. I like to dress in what looks like sophisticated, designer-like, extremely fashionable clothes. The quality is excellent, and I have a collection of them. X-Tina was the Old Prince and Of Montreal, something interesting is astroturf. The poplar Nicklelodeon program Yo Gabba Gabba! has done that successfully with the integration of these musicians into the randomness of children’s programs.

Florida's Heisman winner has put up big numbers in his games against Carolina

Ryan Velazquez
THE DAILY GAMECOCK

As South Carolina looks to extend its home winning streak to eight tomorrow, there's little doubt in anyone's mind what its main challenge will be in facing the No. 1 Gators.

"It's a force running the ball, and he's an excellent passer," coach Steve Spurrier said. "He'll be a big challenge, but we're looking forward to seeing what will happen here Saturday afternoon."

In his previous two meetings against Carolina as a starter, Tebow put up some impressive numbers, to say the least. Playing against two highly-ranked defenses, he combined for 477 yards through the air, 159 yards on the ground and 10 total touchdowns, leading his team to a total of 107 points in the process.

As it prepares to face one of the best in that category, the Gamecock defense will need a much stronger showing.

"He might be the best third-down quarterback that's ever played," Spurrier said. "In all of their championships, both SEC and national, he was sensational on third down.

Despite boasting one of the nation's best offenses, the Gators haven't been lighting up the scoreboard quite as much this season. After averaging 43.6 points per game during their championship run last year, Florida has posted 35 points per game so far in 2009.

"I think there have been little things in different games where offensively we could've done better," Tebow said. "There have been a few opportunities when we left a few points on the field where we could've converted and put it in the end zone a few more times."

With Florida's scoring a bit subdued as of late, USC hopes to keep it that way.

"It definitely gives us confidence, but at the same time, even though they haven't done as much as they did last year, they've definitely done a lot," senior defensive tackle Melvin Ingram said. "They're still winning, they still score on a consistent basis and they're finding ways to get it done."

As the Gamecocks prepare for their final regular season game in the SEC, it seems only fitting that it comes against a fellow Florida quarterback and Heisman Trophy winner in Spurrier.

"It's a tough guy to bring down. He's a strong guy," Norwood said. "Whether I've got to go get him or somebody else does, we've got to put [the Florida offense] into it before they were already going off with it," Pepper said. "They scored on us pretty quick. We definitely remember what happened last year."

If Carolina is to slow Tebow down and come away with undoubtedly the biggest win in program history, the same mindset and confidence from its young roster will be of the utmost importance.

"I like this team, and I like our attitude," Spurrier said. "Our young guys are showing an excellent commitment around here. We're very encouraged."
Maddox earns start in final SEC contest

Junior tailback regains role against bruising Florida defense

Justin Wilson

The Daily Gamecock

Going into Carolina's game against Arkansas last week, much of the attention was focused on the battle in the air between Stephen Garcia and Ryan Mallett, and rightly so, with the two quarterbacks vying for SEC on passing yards. However, this forced the running game to suffer and it showed, as the Gamecocks totaled a lukewarm 53 yards on the ground.

In fact, the longest rushing gain last weekend didn’t even come from a running back; it came from wide receiver Moe Williams. This week, the Gamecocks will look to reestablish the running game when they face off against Florida, and leading that charge will be tailback Brian Maddox.

Maddox, who leads the Gamecocks in touchdowns this year, was the starter earlier in the season, but he has been in a contributing role the past few weeks behind leading rusher Kenny Miles. After a solid outing against Arkansas, the junior has regained the top spot.

“More of a finesse back than a power [one],” Miles said when asked about what he was doing wrong over the past few weeks.

Maddox and the rest of the Carolina offense will have their hands full this week, as they will be lining up against a defensive unit that leads the Football Bowl Division in scoring defense, allowing just 10.1 points per game, and is ranked second in total defense, giving up a galley 212.2 yards per game.

At the head of this stout Gator defense is linebackers Brandon Spikes. Spikes will be returning to the playing field this weekend after serving a one-game suspension against Vanderbilt for trying to gouge the eyes of Georgia running back Washoun Felix.

He later went on to regret his own activity and apologize for his actions. Spikes has been on a tear this season for the Gators, recording 35 total tackles and three sacks in six games. He also returned an interception for a touchdown in Florida’s game against Georgia, something he did against the Gamecocks in last season's game.

USC coach Steve Spurrier feels that Maddox will play a big part in trying to attack the Gator defense.

“Brutis a little bigger and he can block those blitzing linebackers a little better, so we’ll see how it goes,” Spurrier said.

Spurrier went on to add that this will be one of the most difficult games for Carolina this season.

“They are a very good team,” Spurrier said. “They do whatever is necessary to win the game.”

He later went on to reference Florida’s games against Arkansas and Mississippi State earlier in the season and how those teams were able to control the ball and not fall behind early. Keeping the game close will mean running the ball on a consistent basis and controlling the clock down the stretch.

To get that, Maddox will have to have a big day both on the ground and in protection.

“We certainly hope to get in a close game with them, somehow,” Spurrier said.

Gators look to test air against Carolina

Tight end Hernandez presents problems for Gamecock defense

The Daily Gamecock

This weekend, the South Carolina defense will face the daunting task of trying to stop the highly ranked Florida offense. The state of Florida’s offense contains is regarded as one of the best in the nation.

The Gators will be bringing their No. 14 offense, their Heisman-toting quarterback and the rest of their weapons to Williams-Brice Stadium, and the Gamecocks will be waiting and ready to defend their home field.

The Gators have been criticized this year for not being quite as explosive as the Gators of a year ago. Despite naysaying, coach Steve Spurrier is not taking the Gamecocks lightly this year.

“They were so good last year. They have not been quite as explosive as the Gators of a year ago,” Spurrier said.

While Tebow garnishes the majority of the attention from the media and opposing defenses, the Gators are far from a one-man show. With playmakers like former wide receiver Percy Harvin gone, other players have been taking on new roles in the offense. One of those players, junior tight end and Aaron Hernandez, has taken on a more defined role following Harvin’s departure.

The Bronco, coast, native is the Gators’ leading receiver coming into Saturday’s game, with 41 receptions on the year. Hernandez, who had a touchdown in last year’s blowout win against the Gamecocks, will be looking to continue his past success against Carolina.

Sophomore safety Antonio Allen will be looking to patrol the Gamecocks secondary and prevent Hernandez from having the same type of success that he had last year. Allen and the Gamecocks will look to continue the success that they had against the pass this season.

The defense will be looking to rebound from last week’s effort, in which the Gamecocks yielded over 400 total yards and 31 points to Arkansas.

The Gators also struggled to get off of the field last week, as the Razorbacks converted 10 of 16 third downs. Arkansas quarterback Ryan Mallett completed over 80 percent of his passes for the game, only throwing four incompletions in the process, good for a school record.

“We didn’t play as well as Arkansas played,” Spurrier said.

They are a very good team,” Spurrier said. “They do whatever is necessary to win the game.”

We didn’t play as well as Arkansas played. They played flawless and we had about the same amount of yards as they did, some amount of first downs exactly, but they played a little sharper than we did and that’s how you lose,” Spurrier said.

The opposition certainly doesn’t get any easier with the Gators, as Allen and USC’s secondary face a Florida offense that has converted 48 percent of its third downs for the year.

The Gamecocks will attempt to stop just the general rating last year that yield a 50-point beat-down in the swamp. The Gamecocks of a year ago couldn’t seem to do anything right, and mistakes combined with big plays from the Florida offense resulted in the blowout loss. With last year behind it, Carolina will be looking to avenge last year’s loss with a win on Saturday.

“Florida is a good team, we just need to go play the best we can and see what happens. We’re not going to win every game this year,” Spurrier said.

“We are a different team. We will go from there.”

I would be shocked. The Gators’ offense has struggled all season and still hasn’t seemed to find an answer for the departure of wide receivers Percy Harvin and Louis Murphy, both of whom are now playing in the NFL. Florida hasn’t had the ability to break off as many big plays, leading to fewer opportunities for the defense. As long as UF doesn’t have too many turnovers, the Gators seem to have a better chance of getting the win. But I imagine they’ll have to play quite well to do it.

As much as every player or coach will tell you, they don’t want to lose by a point or two. This one might remain a close call in ’05 and ’06. Let me first say this. I’ve done this for a while, but I see Florida having too many turnovers. The Gators have gotten over their turnover problem in the past, but I imagine they’ll have several long, methodical drives. Florida’s offense will likely put on yet another lackluster showing. The Gators seem to have many more problems on defense than 10 points on UF, even with how much Stephen Garcia has improved. Well, I’m pretty sure it’ll be the other way around. Meyer has benefited greatly from the presence of his Heisman Trophy winner. While Tebow’s lackluster start this year has hurt him, don’t forget that No. 15 was being thrown around in conversations as being the greatest college football player of all time before this season started. Some may still count him in those circles, although he has looked a lot more human and pedestrian this year.

Still, Florida has won 19 games in a row, and Tebow is a big reason why. He still contributes third-and-short opportunities like nobody’s business and is an emotional leader that teammates and fans alike can rally around. The last two years, by comparison, Florida has won by an average of 35 points. The last two years, by comparison, Florida has won by an average of 35 points. early 20-5 lead and held on for a 30-22 victory. It marked the first win over Florida by three consecutive games against the Gamecocks, outscoring USC by a total of 124-53. Carolina has hosted a No. 1 team at Williams-Brice Stadium. The Gators have won entirely camo gear. Additionally, players’ last names will be replaced with words such as honor, integrity, courage and commitment. After the game, some uniforms will have teamed up to outfit the Gamecocks with military-themed clothing. Carolina’s military, USC apparel company Under Armour and the Wounded Warrior Project will be auctioned off on USC’s Web site, with proceeds going to the Wounded Warrior Project.

Injury report: For South Carolina, junior defensive end Cliff Matthews is questionable with a shoulder injury. Coach Steve Spurrier initially ruled him out until at least the Clemson game after World War II when it takes on the No. 6 with Tennessee and Georgia left on their schedule. Rich Brooks’ crew will have an uphill climb to get out of the division cellar. Vandy is playing calm a lot of people down in the Bulldog Nation, but that has been overshadowed by the legal issues of three Volunteer players, including receiver Nick Rivers, Richardson, who were taken into custody Thursday morning for attempted armed robbery. Lane Kiffin has taken a lot of heat ever since he arrived in Knoxville, but up until this point, his team had not been able to find wins off-the-field behavioral issues. Is it interesting to see what effect, if any, the arrests will have on the field for UT.

Continuing the streak?: Believe it or not, Williams-Brice Stadium might suddenly be becoming a nightmare for the opposition to play in. Dating back to last season, the Gamecocks have won eight consecutive games at home. Even more impressive, Carolina has won six consecutive conference games at home, including their schedule. Twenty-five years ago, the Gamecocks pulled off the upset of the day and held on for a 30-22 victory. Notes: Tennessee (5-4, 3-3) @ Auburn (7-3, 3-3) TV: ESPN2 Time: 7 p.m. Notes: The oldest rivalry in the South doesn’t mean as much as it usually does in terms of the SEC championship race, but both teams still have a lot at stake. The Tigers can finish strong down the stretch for first-year coach Gene Chizik, they are likely looking at a berth in the Cotton Bowl. On the other side, a win would calm a lot of people down in the Bulldog Nation, as UGA is limping towards bowl eligibility with Georgia Tech having two wins over teams who, points won’t be as a minimum – both defenses have struggled mightily of late.

Notes: Auburn’s (9-4, 4-1) @ Vanderbilt (2-8, 0-8) 12:01 p.m. Notes: Ah, a good old-fashioned battle to stay out of the dawson cellar. Vandy is playing solidly for pride in this one, but like most of the conference, the Wildcats’ postseason destiny is a very much at stake in this one. Lose here, and Rich Brooks’ crew will have an uphill climb to win No. 6 with Tennessee and Georgia left on their schedules.
