HOLLINGSWORTH VS. GPL: SUPREME COURT TO DECIDE LIBRARY SUPPORT

Public librarians around the state are waiting rather anxiously for the South Carolina Supreme Court's decision in a tax case which could seriously affect library and other public services. Final arguments in the so-called Hollingsworth suit were heard by the Supreme Court on February 24, and the Court may announce its decision at any time. At stake in the case are funds which have already been budgeted for county libraries, hospitals, recreation and cultural centers, and at least one fire department.

The suit, originally brought by J. D. Hollingsworth of Wheels of Greenville and later joined by the State Chamber of Commerce and the S. C. Textile Manufacturer's Association, centers on a state law which allows corporations a five year exemption from all property taxes, except those levied by schools and municipalities, providing those corporations have just located in the state or if existing corporations have made additions to the property in excess of $50,000. The original suit was filed some three years ago, and taxes have been paid by the plaintiffs "under dispute." Because taxes paid under dispute are withheld from agency budgets, the suit has resulted in layoffs and cutbacks. The problem for libraries is whether they will be considered educational institutions. The five-year exemption was originally intended to attract new industry to South Carolina.

Greenville County Library director Anthony Messineo has said that the suit, if decided against the library, could cost GPL nearly $390,000. The effect of the taxes already withheld has led to considerable belt-tightening. GPL's employee newsletter stated recently that the library has no plans at present for layoffs, but a hiring freeze has already been instituted and the book budget has been "dramatically decreased." Spartanburg County Public Library is in a similar manner after that library was notified several weeks ago that four companies have paid $60,000 in taxes "under protest."

S. C. State Librarian Betty Callaham, when contacted about the suit, said that libraries across the state would be affected in different ways by an adverse decision in the suit, depending on how local legislation defines libraries. Ms. Callaham said, "It seems to be an issue now only in Greenville, Anderson, Lexington, and Spartanburg, but the actual impact remains to be seen. The heart of the matter is that state law recognizes libraries as educational institutions, but tax law speaks only of schools." Ms. Callaham said that a negative decision by the Supreme Court would be a "setback," as libraries across the state have been working for years to be recognized as educational institutions, and status as an educational institution has been the basis of state support for libraries.

Asked if she had a feeling for how the Court would decide, Ms. Callaham replied that she felt it was a "difficult decision for the Court to make, because the suit deals with a mixed bag of agencies." Under the present arrangement, a wide variety of agencies receive taxes from such levies, including libraries, hospitals, art museums, sewer and fire districts, etc. "The Court," said Ms. Callaham, "should rule separately on each agency involved.

MEANWHILE, IN WASHINGTON

On the Federal level, there was more bad news for libraries. Ms. Callaham told N&V that postal subsidies for programs serving the blind are in severe danger of being cut, and those cuts will seriously affect the distribution of materials for the blind and handicapped. Recent recommendations in the Administration's 1982 budget call for the reduction of "postal revenue foregone" -- that is, lowered costs for the mailing of some classes of materials. Congressional budget committees will have to decide whether those recommendations will be carried out, but the mood in Washington is decidedly for a balanced budget and the postal recommendations stand a strong chance of success.

Ms. Callaham said that such action may wipe out services to the blind and handicapped. The Library of Congress has said that it would not be able to distribute materials to the states, and that the states would not be able to obtain many materials elsewhere. "LC's mailing budget would be larger than the entire 1982 budget for the National Library Services for the Blind," said Ms. Callaham. "South Carolina's budget for those services would be $260,000 for 1982, and by 1984 costs would increase to $315,000, and that's with book rate mailing." Ms. Callaham also added that the current book rate postage charges are also under attack. Increased costs for mailing for the blind would go into effect this coming October 1.

Ms. Callaham said she had planned to emphasize the difficulties that would be placed upon libraries and the handicapped by such cuts at the annual legislative day, in Washington, but given the current mood of Congress to reach a balanced budget she could not hold out any strong hope for a reversal of the cuts. Ms. Callaham urged librarians throughout the state to contact their legislators and to make known the effects of proposed cuts in library-related programs.

STATE LIBRARY ASKS FOR NETWORKING FEASIBILITY STUDY

John Landrum, Director of Reader Services at the S. C. State Library reports that on January 28 the State Library mailed a request for proposal (RFP) for a networking feasibility study to eight vendors. The study, as stipulated in the RFP, will cover the "feasibility of establishing and operating a statewide library network for South Carolina by identifying the potential functions of such a network, the products and services to be derived from it, and the probable cost of alternative network approaches."

In 1979, the Task Force on Library Automation and Networking, representing all types of libraries, was organized to advise the State Library on automation and network planning. The Task Force surveyed the status of library automation in the state. Based on this survey, it was agreed that a statewide library network utilizing computer and telecommunications technology to improve access to library materials throughout the state was a desirable goal. The Task Force then approved the idea of conducting a feasibility study.

It is anticipated that the feasibility study will assist South Carolina's library community in reaching a consensus regarding the structure and functions of a statewide network and will serve as a basis for obtaining any necessary legislative action. The study is to include a plan of action which would identify preliminary steps to be taken prior to the actual network structure and design.

Deadline for receipt of the formal proposal document by the State Library is April 3, with notification to bidders to be made on May 8. John Landrum, Director of Reader Services, is serving as the contact person on the proposal.

NOMINATIONS SOLICITED

Each year the South Carolina Library Association accepts nominations for its Friends of Libraries Award which seeks to recognize a lay person who has given unselfishly of their time and talents in the sustained period. Nominations of friends of school and academic libraries are particularly encouraged. Any member of the South Carolina Library Association can make a nomination by sending to the SCLA Publicity Committee, c/o Ilene Nelson, Spartanburg County Public Library, P. O. Box 2409, Spartanburg, S. C. 29304, a letter of recommendation accompanied by a concise statement of the nominee's specific contributions which demonstrate his distinguished service to libraries. Nominations for the 1981 Award which will be presented at the SCLA/NCLA joint convention should be submitted by July 1, 1981.

MEMBERSHIP RENEWALS DUE!!

If you haven't already done so, please remember to renew your SCLA membership. The deadline for inclusion in this year's directory is May 1, and if your membership renewal hasn't been received by that time you can't be listed in the directory. But that's just a minor point. What's important is that SCLA needs your support, year-round, in order to effectively represent the total library effort in South Carolina. There's a lot happening in libraries today -- from automation efforts to budget cuts -- and South Carolina's growth means that what we do today will have a major impact on tomorrow's libraries. SCLA is your organization -- and we need you!
