'84 CONFERENCE RESCHEDULED

SCLA President Paul Dove has announced that the 1984 SCLA Annual Conference has been rescheduled for September 13, 14, and 15, 1984.

The Conference had been scheduled for November 1-3. "We suddenly realized," said President Dove, "that we were scheduling our convention for the same time that the American Association of School Librarians was planning their national conference in Atlanta. If it were in San Francisco, or someplace equally distant, it probably wouldn't make much difference. But with AASL in Atlanta, we'd be forcing a lot of school librarians to make a difficult choice. It's better for us to move our conference date."

President Dove noted that the Carolina Inn in Columbia, site of the '84 Conference, has already agreed to the change. He said, though, "September was the only acceptable time for both the Carolina Inn and SCLA. Southeastern Library Association's conference is in October, and Carolina Inn has contractual obligations that preclude any time but September."

INTELLECTUAL FREEDOM HANDBOOK PUBLISHED

SCLA's Intellectual Freedom Committee has formally announced the publication of its Intellectual freedom handbook, according to IFC Chairman Dr. Dan Barron. Publication of the handbook, funded in part by a grant from the South Carolina Committee for the Humanities, caps the work of groups representing both SCLA and the South Carolina Association of School Librarians.

Dr. Barron, in describing the publication, described it as "the one place to find all documents published by ALA's Office for Intellectual Freedom relating to this continuing problem." In addition to the Freedom to Read Statement and other related items, the Handbook sets down guidelines for dealing with challenges to materials, and should it become necessary, procedures for asking ALA for help.
SCLA President Paul Dove, in a letter of congratulations to the SCLA Intellectual Freedom Committee, said, "It is an ideal document for us to have available and represents what our professional associations ought to be doing for our membership and the libraries we serve. ... While I can certainly take extremely little credit for your committee's fine work, it will no doubt be the highlight of my year as SCLA President to report and remember that you and your committee published this guide in 1983."

Each library in the state of South Carolina will receive one free copy of the publication. Libraries who have not received their copy should contact Dr. Barron at the USC College of Library and Information Science.

In a related development, Dr. Barron announced that legislation is being introduced into the State Legislature to protect the confidentiality of library records. At present, some 13 states (including Alabama) have such laws on record, which guard the privacy of libraries' borrowers' records.

NOMINATING PROCESS QUESTIONED

Drucie Reeves, SCLA Vice President/President - Elect, reports that questions have again been raised about procedures for identifying and ratifying the Association's leadership from year to year. Under consideration by the Association is a proposal to drop the practice of forming a ballot of several candidates for each office (on which the membership then votes), in favor of a single slate of candidates chosen by the nominating committee.

"Finding enough people to run for office isn't easy at all," said Ms. Reeves. "A lot of people have been saying 'no' for various reasons. In particular, it seems to be hard to get people to run a second time after they've lost their first election. This is not to say that our present slate isn't top-notch - but in general it's really getting to be a hassle."

Compounding the problem, reports Ms. Reeves, is low voter turnout. "In our last election, we had a total response from about 200 voters. That's out of a membership of around 800."

At the end of this issue of N&V is a questionnaire regarding the nominating system. The Executive Board of SCLA requests that you complete the questionnaire and return it as soon as possible. (Mailing information is on the questionnaire.)
CE ADVISORY GROUP MEETS

A group representing a variety of libraries, associations, and agencies met August 5 to discuss the continuing education effort of USC's College of Library and Information Science. The College indicated that the loss of its full-time CE coordinator position would result in fewer activities. Nevertheless, certain events can be counted on for next year, including DIALOG workshops, intellectual freedom workshops related to the grant from the South Carolina Committee for the Humanities, microcomputer workshops (especially on request from specific groups), the microcomputer TV course, and the College's Tenth Year Celebration. A representative of the College indicated that despite cutbacks, the College is still committed to a strong service program to the professional community in the state.

Members of the group were asked to indicate what areas they felt needed to be addressed by continuing education programs. Among the responses were:

- a follow-up workshop on creating bibliographic instruction materials for academic and school libraries.

- a workshop on library-specific microcomputer software, directed at all types of libraries.

- hands-on experience with OCLC and online database searching as an update for librarians who graduated before the advent of such tools.

- an update of children's literature, young adult literature, AV and technology for specific library personnel.

One request asked for "an updating of basic skills." Asked for more specific information, the requestor responded, "So many feel so out of touch with what's going on."
